Now what about that "League of Nations" in which the great powers were to act together to end all their troubles?

England and France rule in the league. But England and France are going in different directions. France will fight Russia by recognizing and co-operating with General Wrangel.

England, wanting no more fight, says to Poland: "You got into it. Now get out of it."

Do you think this country should be mixed up in that league, called upon to go with France against Russia, or remain neutral with England, or obey orders in Mesopotamia?

Charles W. Mills, a prosperous gentleman, offers $500 to the young woman possessing "the prettiest feet and ankles."

To begin with, human feet, with shoes and stockings off, are not pretty. The foot, originally made to grasp a limb and pick up objects from the ground, has not become beautiful, as it has gradually changed into a flat support to hold up the body. Feet are not pretty, ankles are not important.

Somebody ought to offer a prize for the young woman with the best shaped forehead, back head and skull generally. The most important measurement would be from the top of the ear to the top of the head. All brain is above the ear.

Other measurements—height and breadth of forehead, depth of the back head that balances the front head, width of forehead and especially the line of the forehead straight up and down.

The straight forehead is the best. If it bulges out at the top so much the better. The change from the monkey and lowest savage has been a gradual straightening of the forehead from a flat to a perpendicular position.

Women's chief business is creating men. True. But men are useless without brains, and they inherit their brains from their mothers. Therefore, a woman's brain is important. Women really should wear short hair, show the skull's shape and let a young man select intelligence.

In one month, in the biggest city in the country, plans are filed for one dwelling, one apartment house, five theatres, one hundred and fifteen garages and three loft structures. This doesn't look much like solving the "housing problem" except for automobiles.

Ponzi of Boston, financial "mystery man," gives himself up and is arrested. The officials say he "owes" seven million dollars. He may prove a useful citizen, for he operated on a scale big enough to attract attention. Reading what happened to those that accepted his offer of fifty per cent. interest every three months may save simple souls from oil stocks of the Ponzi variety.

Collectors of income tax say that we have twenty thousand millionaires. Allowing an average of five millions, which is moderate, you discover that twenty thousand people own one hundred and twenty billions, which is one hundred and twenty times one thousand million dollars, and you discover that this is quite a prosperous country.

Take the rest of the population, estimate the cash value of a human being at one thousand dollars each, price of a good black slave before the war, and you have one hundred thousand millions more. This really IS a prosperous country.

It would be VERY prosperous, permanently safe and a much happier land for all, including the twenty thousand that have the hundred and twenty billions, if the intelligence of the country could be used to produce and distribute enough for all, instead of being used to get too much for a few.

Why should the government continue what all but savages have discarded? Go among savages, you find them expressing joy or grief, always with a loud noise. They beat tom-toms, beat their breasts, roar, create as much noise as possible, then feel better.

Whether they hail the rule of a new chief or bewail the burial of a dead one, it is the same thing—NOISE.

Civilized creatures have given that up largely, but not civilized governments.

A President, a Secretary of War or Navy arrives, guns are fired off, making a noise and wasting money.

An able and useful man, Gorgas, surgeon-general of the army, is brought home dead and big guns of the fort fire a salute, making a noise and wasting money.

Is it not time for civilized governments, so-called, as well as individuals, to learn some better method of expressing emotion than beating a tom-tom or firing off a gun?

POISON GAS FELLS 30 AT FIRE

Ten Firemen in Serious Condition From Carbon Monoxide in Hold of Steamship

Between thirty and forty firemen, including a deputy chief and a district chief, were overcome today while fighting a fire in the hold of the steamship Ontario of the Merchants' and Miners' Line.

Ten or a dozen of those overcome were removed to either the Relief or City Hospital, so serious was their condition.

Dense fumes of carbon monoxide, which filled the hold, made it necessary that such firemen as were able to penetrate it wear gas masks. And constantly even these were toppled over and found by their mates, who groped through the choking haze in their work.

It was the most disastrous fire in the history of the Boston department in point of men seriously overcome. Particically every member of the first company that responded to a still alarm, Ladder Eight, toppled over as

RUSSIANS TO GREET POLES

Peace Parley Arranged for Tomorrow Afternoon at Minsk, Warsaw Announces

London, Aug. 13.—Press representatives will be admitted to the Russo-Polish armistice parley, scheduled to begin at Minsk tomorrow, according to an official announcement by the Polish government telegraphed from Warsaw today.

By International News Service.

Warsaw, Aug. 12, via London, Aug. 13.—A Polish delegation with full powers to negotiate an armistice and peace preliminaries will cross the Russo-Polish line near Siedlce Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, it was announced tonight. The Poles will go direct to Minsk.

The wireless misunderstandings between Warsaw and Moscow were finally cleared up today following the return of the Polish envoys, who had set out for Minsk.

The Polish delegates reported that they were hospitably received at the

FEARS PAWTUCKET WOMAN WAS DROWNED

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 13.—The police are searching for Mrs. John Reoford, thirty-four years old, who disappeared from No. 26 Bloomingdale avenue, Tuesday. Her husband will ask the police to drag the Ten-Mile River. The missing woman was last seen going toward the river.

Venizelos Shot in Constantine Plot

Paris, Aug. 13.—The police expressed belief today that the two former Greek army officers arrested after attempting to assassinate Premier Venizelos of Greece last night are involved in a plot to restore former King Constantine to the Greek throne. M. Venizelos was shot and wounded while waiting for a train.

Surgeons removed a bullet from his shoulder today and issued a bulletin saying he was resting easily.

Following interrogation of the two prisoners, it was announced they had made a confession, adding they wanted to see Constantine restored to the Greek throne.

GIRL, 14, IN LOVE, TAKES POISON

Swallows Strychnine at Her Home in Lynn; Is in Critical Condition

Eldora Pinkham, fourteen years old, attempted to commit suicide by taking strychnine at her home on Clifton avenue, Lynn, today. She is in a critical condition at Lynn Hospital.

An unhappy love affair caused the girl's despondency and attempt at self-destruction, according to police. She returned to her home early today and went immediately to the bathroom. A few minutes later her mother, Mrs. Charles Pinkham, heard a noise. She found the girl on the floor and a receptacle containing strychnine by her side. The poison was one of the component parts of a heart remedy used by Mrs. Pinkham.

Eldora was on probation for running away from home. She left home with another girl a year ago, starting for Detroit. They were caught in New York and returned to their parents.

POLICEMAN, DIZZY, FALLS 3 STORIES TO DEATH

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 13.—Patrolman Edward T. Smith died at the Memorial Hospital as a result of injuries sustained when he fell three stories from a piazza at his home. A spell of dizziness caused him to lose his balance.

MADDENED DUPES MAKE THREATS

Payments to investors were suspended today by the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, the mushroom organization which sprang up at No. 54 Devonshire street in the wake of the Ponzi bubble.

Frightened officials of the company, literally besieged in their private offices by 150 maddened dupes, would only say they acted "on orders from the District Attorney."

Threats of violence were freely made by the victims gathered to get their money back, and President C. M. Brightwell of the company kept strictly to his inner office, under guard of loyal but badly frightened followers.

The company was ordered to stop payments when President Brightwell practically admitted that it was insolvent, and could not pay back more than a fraction of the money lured from "investors."

Similar action had already been taken by District Attorney Joseph T. Kenny of New Bedford, where the doors of the branch office of the Old Colony were closed last night.

The Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company has had a history even more spectacular than Ponzi, President Brightwell's model. Starting two weeks ago with $500 in capital, the promoters have taken in hundreds of thousands of dollars from the easily fooled.

This money, according to the officials of the company, was to be invested in some mysterious "business" of the Ponzi stamp in Europe.

Brightwell today admitted to newspapermen that not a dollar's worth of business had yet been done in Europe, and that much of the money taken from investors had been squandered on rentals, office fixtures and commissions to agents.

From the Attorney-General's office

MOVE TO GET BACK $6,000,000

Legal action to compel all Ponzi note holders to refund nearly $6,000,000 paid them by Charles Ponzi during the last four months was taken in the bankruptcy court today by counsel acting for the Ponzi Creditors Protective Association. The counsel is the firm of Horblit & Wasserman of No. 53 State street.

This means that all note holders who have cashed in, even if they sold their notes to speculators, are to be compelled to return their money, which will be merged with other assets.

At the same time it was stated that the note holders and other creditors of Ponzi will have the first call, provided Ponzi is adjudged a bankrupt on August 25, when a hearing is to be held on the involuntary petition filed last Monday.

It is said that depositors of the Hanover Trust Company will not share in this distribution, as the bank was decided to have been protected by the 1,500 shares of stock controlled by Ponzi under double liability.

In this connection Bany Commissioner Allen said that as far as he knew Ponzi did not owe the Hanover Trust Company any money, outside of his liability as a stockholder. He also denied that any banks other than the Hanover Trust Company were involved in the Ponzi crash.

While events were transpiring with considerable rapidity in the Ponzi case, his chief rival, the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, which District Attorney Pelletier said "out-Ponzied Ponzi," was closed by his order.

Police Commissioner Curtis took

WIFE BEATER KILLED RESISTING ARREST

Balston Spa, N. Y., Aug. 13.—While resisting arrest, Thomas Corcoran, aged 42, of North Milton, was killed here early today by Police Chief James J. O'Brien. Mrs. Corcoran had registered a complaint in police headquarters against her husband, charging he had attacked her. In attempting to bring Cocoran to jail a fight ensued. O'Brien struck Corcoran twice over the dea with his night stick, the second blow causing a compound fracture of the skull.

CROWD CHASES PONZI IMITATORS

Eight policemen today cleaned out the offices of the Old Colony Exchange Co., the rival Ponzi concern, 54 Devonshire street. The mob threatened Brighto, the manager's, life. Word was passed that there was another office at 32 Oliver street. The mob ran down there. The agents escaped down a back stairway, followed by the crowd. Policemen itnervened to save them.

Girl Bids World Adieu and Dies With Suitor

By International News Service.

Emmitsburg, Md., Aug. 13.—An investigation is in progress here today of a most extraordinary tragedy.

J. Ford Thompson, forty-nine years old, clubman, of Washington, noted traveler and artist, and Mary Sneeringer, eighteen years old, an attractive hotel waitress, were found dead in a forest near here. Near the two bodies was an open book of love sonnets and two revolvers. Both the girl and the man had bullet wounds in their right temples.

The tragedy came to light after Mary Sneeringer had disappeared from her aunt's hotel here, where she had been employed. In her room was found a note bidding farewell to the world.

While the authorities have failed to establish a definite motive for the tragedy, it is believed that the two agreed to die together, after Thompson had been told that he must discontinue his attentions to the girl because of her extreme youth.

Thompson was the son of the late Dr. J. Ford Thompson, a noted surgeon. He has a wife and eleven-year-old child in France.

Thompson fought with Colonel Roosevelt's Rough Riders during the Spanish-American war. He is well-known in Europe capitals.

16 Other Workmen Shaken Up as Truck Hits Fence in Wellesley

Four men, members of a party of twenty being conveyed from South Natick to Wellesley, where they were employed, were more or less painfully injured today when the auto truck in which they were riding plunged through a fence on the Hunnewell estate and down an embankment.

The injured were removed to the Natick hospital for treatment. Others who suffered minor hurts were treated by doctors and then continued on their way to work at the Diehl Coal Company yards in Wellesley.

The men all live in South Natick, and each morning ride to their labors in the coal yard aboard a motor truck.

PONZI INSISTS HE CAN MEET OBLIGATIONS IF GIVEN CHANCE

ESTIMATE INVESTORS WILL LOSE FIVE MILLIONS

steps to ascertain what dealings members of his department had with Ponzi by sending a questionnaire to each station, with the request that answers be given the commissioner as rapidly as possible.

QUESTIONS BY CURTIS.

In effect the questions are as follows:

Did you invest with Ponzi? If so annex copies of the note received.

What percentage did you receive by the investment?

Who influenced you to go there?

Did you influence anyone to invest with Ponzi?

State whether or not you had any dealings with Ponzi or his agents?

Did you get the notes of Ponzi at a discount? If so, at what discount?

Superintendent of Police Crowley refused to discuss the investigation. He said that when he had been asked by patrolmen and officials about the scheme he had warned them not to invest. Any man, he says, who did invest money in the Ponzi scheme showed an extreme lack of brains.

It is known that a great number of police officers, including patrolmen, sergeants, lieutenants, inspectors and captains, have invested, some heavily.

It is also known that the men who have invested have been directed by their superior officers to make an affidavit telling the status of their case, whether they won, lost or broke even.

It is known that several men in the department borrowed money, and some mortgaged their property. One high official is known to have invested heavily.

LOSSES $5,000,000.

According to a statement by an official of the Postoffice Department at Washington, the investors stand to lose about $5,000,000 through the Ponzi crash. This official declared that the scheme was the most gigantic ever put over on the American people through the agency of the Postoffice Department.

Local Federal authorities stated that if a trustee in bankruptcy were appointed, he could seize all of Ponzi's property, including the much-discussed certificate of deposit for $1,500,000. The first payments made from these assets would be the costs of litigation and bankruptcy.

HOPE FOR DEPOSITORS.

Officials engaged in probing the tangled mass of Ponzi's get-rich-quick scheme announced that every effort would be made to protect the depositors of the Hanover Trust Company, whose officers persist in the statement that it is solvent. Bank Commissioner Allen, on the other hand, has declared that its capital is badly impaired, if not wiped out.

As a result of the closing of the trust company, evidences of disagreement among State officials have appeared, resulting in the statement by State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell that the State has $125,000 on deposit there.

In the meantime the cause of all the trouble and confusion maintained his remarkable nerve, and declared through his counsel, Daniel H. Coakley, that he would fight to the end. Mr. Coakley announced that there would be no backing down on the part of Ponzi or admissions of guilt. He declared that his client insists if permitted to accumulate all his available assets, which are now tied up, he would be fuly able to meet every obligation he has.

CAN'T FIND $2,300,000.

Attorney Coakley was recently reported as admitting that his client showed him $2,300,000 in securities, and speculation is now busy with their present location.

Creditors of Ponzi may yet be able to recover a considerable portion of their losses through the bankruptcy court, according to Miss Mary Prendergast, deputy clerk of the United States district in charge of bankruptcy proceedings.

"If a trustee in bankruptcy is appointed," said Miss Prendergast, "and if he has reason to believe that at the time Ponzi paid interest on matured notes he was insolvent, he can then sue those having received such interest for a return of the money. This money so recovered would then be converted to the creditors of the bankrupt."

Ponzi today added to the elaborate precaustions taken to protect his life as the result of a "Black Hand" death threat.

The threat came in a letter. The writer stid he would wreak vengeance on Ponzi at the first opportuniay. Ponzi, while appearing cool and unafraid, was plainly upset and informed the police of the letter.

PURSUED PONZI 12 YEARS.

An enemy, who boasted that he had pursued Ponzi all over the country for twelve years, sent the "Black Hand" threat to Ponzi. He wrote that he would soon wreak vengeance on the young Italian promoter. Ponzi ing the threat on his life, just before he surrendered to the Federal authorities.

He told Captain Ainsley C. Armstrong, chief of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation at police headquarters, about the "Black Hand" epistle, while they were measuring him and taking his photograph and finger prints for Rogues' Gallery records, following his second arrest in a few hours in connection with his "get-rich-quick" enterprise.

Ponzi refused to state whether he knew the man who seeks to kill him, but friends pointed out that it must be somebody involved in the bank scandal at Montreal, thirteen years ago, following which Ponzi received a sentence of three years for forgery.

Although Ponzi dismissed the subject with a grin while discussing it with police officials, it is known that he entertained dread of attack long before his "mystery of millions" drew the combined scrutiny of city, State and nation.

The array of "strong-arm" men at his School street headquarters for months was commented on while his quick profit scheme flourished. But the pickets to handle crowds, did not excite as much speculation as the sentries posted day and night, and still on duty, in and around his new home in Lexington.

PISTOL UNDER PILLOW.

Private detectives and pugilists have been on Ponzi's payroll for weeks for the purpose of protecting him from sudden attack. Body guards trail him everywhere. One of the guards at his house patrols the lawn and hides behind bushes at night and acts as his butler during the day.

They are all armed. So is Ponzi. He carries an automatic in a pocket easily accessible, and even takes the precaution to put it in the pocket of his bath robe while wearing that garment. He sleeps with a pistol under his pillow.

Ponzi Note for $500 Gets Friend Into Court

Pasquale Carusella, aged twenty-six, of No. 147 Cottage street, East Boston, was arraigned in the East Boston Disrtict Court before Judge Barnes charged with the larceny of $500 from a friend, John Maurano, also of East Boston. Carusella is said to have loaned Maurano $50 on a $500 note, which the latter got from Ponzi on an investment of $500 which, when matured, would be redeemed for $750.

Maurano claimed he paid Carusella the $50 and the latter refused to give him his note back. Carusella claimed that Maurano sold him the note. After a little consideration Judge Barnes put the case on file, after the note was given to the rightful owner and restitution of the $50 was made.

$200,000 Still Owing to Manchester Investors

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 13.—The Manchester office of the Securities Exchange Co. in this city remains closed, although the office force is still at work checking up the accounts.

Agent Joseph Bruno estimates the amount owed to Manchester subscribers at $200,000. It is estimated that the original amount was $350,000.

Bruno is still confident, he says, that no one will lose their money and that Ponzi is solvent.

Fitchburg Citizens' Losses Will Total About $10,000

Fitchburg, Aug. 13.—It is estimated by officials of this city that losses of Fitchburg citizens will total about $10,000. Since Ponzi refused to accept loans Fitchburg lenders redeemed notes to the total value of about $15,000.

MEN IN AIRPLANE FIND WOMAN'S BODY

Southampton, L. I., Aug. 13.—Men in an airplane which joined in a search of nearby waters for Miss Alice Wing of Boston and her nephew, William Russell, twelve years old, discovered the woman's body several miles from shore. The hunt had been in progress twenty-four hours.

The body of the boy, who was the son of Philip Russell of the law firm of Wing & Russell, has not been found. All hope that he might have survived the accident in which his aunt lost her life has been abandoned, however.

ARREST TWO IN RAID ON MOUNTAIN STILLS

Lenox, Aug. 13.—Amedo Continelli and Arthur Macreau, of Washington Mountain, were today arraigned in the police court on a charge of maintaining a liquor nuisance. Their counsel entered a plea of no jurisdiction and the case was continued to Wednesday, bonds being placed at $500. The police say they found a still in the cellar of Continelli, three barrels of mash, and five gallons of whiskey. At Macreau's they found a still and liquor.

1920 POPULATION OF NEW HAMPSHIRE 443,083

Washington, Aug. 13.—The 1920 population of New Hampshire is 443,083, an increase since 1910 of 12,511, or 2.9 per cent, the Census Bureau announced today. Other figures include:

Rockingham county, including Portsmouth, N. H., 1920 population, 52,498; increase since 1910, 310, or 0.6 per cent.

PAWTUCKET OFFICE TOOK IN $200,000

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 13.—Residents of this city and Central Falls invested over $200,000 in Ponzi's Securities Exchange Company. His local office in the Taylor building has been closed for a week.

Mrs. Ponzi Still Has Faith in Husband

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ponzi, photographed at their home in Lexington.

Stoutly maintaining that her husband is honest, Mrs. Charles Ponzi declares she loves him more than ever and will stand by him to the end. The little woman, who has successfully evaded the limelight during her husband's stupendous get-rich-quick scheme, stated her attitude in the present trial.

She had just received the news that her husband had surrendered to the authorities, when a reporter for the American visited her at her Lexington home, which has been one of the show places for the town for the past few weeks. The stalwart butler who, incidentally, is a detective, protested that the wife could not be seen. He feared that she would collapse from the shock if approached.

He finally consented to ask Mrs. Ponzi if she cared to tell her story. Mrs. Ponzi, clad entirely in white, came on the front piazza and shook hands vigorously. Apparently not in the least upset by the tragic event, she bared a secret that not even her husband was aware of.

KNEW HE WAS CONVICT.

Her first words were: "I love him more than ever." Then she wanted it understood that she did not want to "pose," but merely to say what came from the bottom of her heart.

"My faith in my husband is as unshaken as it was before," she said. "I shall stick by him to the end, for I am convinced that he is honest," she said. "For a moment, of course, the news that he had surrendered stunned me, but I was prepared for it. His mother came to me and asked, 'Will it make any difference?' and I replied that nothing could change my love for him," she continued.

"I knew it all the time that he had served in jail at Montreal and Atlanta, but I do not believe he knew that I did. His mother wrote me a letter telling me all about it when she learned of my engagement to Charlie. It did not make any difference then and it does not now.

BELIEVES HIM HONEST.

"I do not suppose that everybody has the faith in him that I have. The people do not know him the way I do. No man who served a prison term for another man's sin and who gave of his skin to save a woman he never had seen could be considered dishonest. His term in jail for another's mistake could have nothing to do with his present affairs.

"I am confident that he will come out of his present troubles with his integrity unimpaired. He is honest and I will stay by him to the end, even though it should be a bitter one.

"Sometimes I wish that we never had a cent of money, so that I can better prove my faithfulness toward him. He was too big a man to let them come and arrest him. He had a purpose, I believe, in surrendering, and will soon prove his honesty to the world."

Mrs. Ponzi's romance was a short one. As Miss Rose Guecco she met him in 1917. They were married on February 4, 1918. To sum it up, Mrs. Ponzi characterises her "Charlie" as "a model husband."

LAWRENCE HIT HARD BY PONZI

His Richest Field, Says Manager; Hundreds Vainly Besiege Offices

Lawrence, Aug. 13.—Their notes in hand, hundreds of alarmed mill operative investors in the Ponzi scheme called at the Lawrence office of the Securities Exchange here in a vain endeavor to dispose of them. It was found that the note speculators in this city, who were mostly agents of Ponzi, had ceased buying.

"I went my limit and every cent I have in the world is in the Ponzi scheme," said Christian Rhiem, assistant manager of the Lawrence office as he displayed fifteen notes which he had bought in within a week. They represented amounts from $200 up to $1,000. "If the thing is a fizzle, as many now believe, I will take my loss like thousands of others."

TOOK IN MILLION A WEEK.

"At one stage of the game, we were taking in a million a week," said Percy Lamb, manager of the office. "Some weeks we took in less and never did the books show less than $700,000 for a week during the busy weeks."

Policemen, city officials, teachers, bankers and business men fell in line with hundreds of mill operatives and invested their money. Houses were mortgaged and money was raised on one, two and three-name notes in the banks.

Lawrence, according to Lamb, broke out with "Ponzitis" and was the most successful for Ponzi of any city. Lamb had been the first agent to reach the English-speaking people.

Lawrence is in gloom today and many long faces were seen in the loitering crowds around the Ponzi office, which Lamb stated will remain open until the "boss" tells him to close. Leaving for Boston immediately after the news of Ponzi's arrest reached Lawrence, Lamb refused to believe the arrest story.

STILL DEAL IN NOTES.

"They are a-kicking Ponzi's character," said Lamb. "He has assets, I will gamble, which will cover his liabilities, dollar for dollar. Why don't they give out the facts? They are treating Ponzi as if he was running for political office."

Notes were changing hands in Lawrence despite unfavorable developments in the Ponzi scheme. At one centre of activity several thousand dollars was exchanged for notes already overdue.

Lamb advised investors to hold on to their notes and that the affair would be adjusted. One sub-agent states he bought in notes heavily on Lamb's advice.

SHOTS FIRED IN REVERE CHASE

Prisoner Held in $10,000 for Alleged Attack on Charlestown Girl

Stephen Phillips, twenty-eight years old, captured near his home on North Shore road, Revere, today after police officers had fired ten shots in an effort to halt him, was held in $10,000 for a hearing August 19 in Revere Court. Phillips is charged with attacking a seventeen-year-old Charlestown girl and with impersonating an officer.

The police say that Tuesday night he accosted a young woman, accompanied by a young man in an automobile in a secluded part of Revere. Flashing a badge and impersonating a policeman, Phillips is alleged to have assaulted the woman, whose name is withheld.

The police declare a similar case is pending against Phillips in Superior Court. Phillips is married, and, according to the police, has a record.

POLISH FLANK COLLAPSES

Russians Advance Steadily Upon Warsaw From North and Northwest

village of Losice, seventy miles east of Warsaw, by a Russion mission headed by Commissar Mullin. The Russian officials were accompanied by a bodyguard wearing black leather uniforms and black caps.

Discussions at Losice resulted in definite plans for the parley at Minsk on Saturday.

A violent battle on which the fate of Warsaw depends is raging over a 100-mile front northwest and north of this city. Terrific hand-to-hand fighting is in progress.

A state of siege has been proclaimed in Warsaw.

The Russians are reported to have captured Pultusk, twenty-six miles north of Warsaw. The Reds are swinging down towards Nasielsk, ten miles south of Pultusk.

The Polish defenders of Mlava, on the Warsaw-Danzig railway, have surrendered without fighting.

POLES OUTFLANKED.

Russian detachments that outflanked the left wing of the Polish army northwest of Warsaw are advancing toward Plock, on the Vistula River.

Masses of Russian reinforcements were thrown into the engagement on the northern front in a desperate effort to break through. Two thousand fresh Polish cavalrymen are being rushed to the front to attempt to stem the Red onrush.

A new Polish army is being organized at Posen.

British Labor Demands Recognition of Soviet

London, Aug. 13.—British organised labor made it unmistakably clear today that it will oppose by "direct action" war on the Bolshevik or a blockade of Soviet Russia.

At a boisterously enthusiastic meeting of the Labor party, a resolution was passed by acclamation announcing labor's determination to force the withdrawal of all British troops from Russia, declaring unequivocal opposition to British support of General Wrangel, whose anti-Soviet regime in the Crimea has been officially recognised by France, and urging immediate recognition of the Moscow government.

Victims of Swindle Demand Money

came the statement that huge sums of money, representing investments, had been sent out of the State by the Old Colony concern.

It is believed this money was sent abroad for the purpose of getting it out of the jurisdiction of the State when the inevitable crash came, rather than for investment.

Attorney-General Allen has assigned specialists to trace this money and bring it back into the jurisdiction of Massachusetts courts pending an investigation of the Old Colony's affairs.

President Brightwell's troubles began as soon as he arrived at the Devonshire street offices today. Alarmed agents were hurriedly resigning their commissions, angry investors were demanding their money back, and newspapermen were demanding interviews.

FAITH HAD VANISHED.

Even that early, and before the suspension of payments was hinted at, the attitude of the crowd was distinctly hostile. Gone was the simple faith of the multitude, gone with the Ponzi bubble.

Most of the "investors" who waited for the office to open in order to retrieve investments made only a few days ago were foreign-speaking, and had been inveigled into the Old Colony scheme by foreign-born agents carefully selected for their influence among their countrymen.

President Brightwell was ill at ease when interviewed. He seemed somewhat downcast by the action of the New Bedford authorities, where his branch office was closed up by order of District Attorney Joseph T. Kenney, and by other investigations launched against him.

In his interview there were more of the conflicting statements which have been a feature of the company since the Boston American several days ago began an inquiry into its affairs.

One moment Mr. Brightwell referred optimistically to "big business" in progress in Europe. Reminded that he had himself contradicted this statement yesterday, when he said no business had yet been done, he hurriedly turned the conversation.

"Mr. Brightwell, you admitted to the District Attorney that you started scarcely more than two weeks ago with only $500, didn't you?" he was asked. He admitted it by silence.

"Then, if you pay rent, and pay agents' commissions, ranging from 5 to 10 per cent., and have done no business, how can you be solvent?" the interviewer continued.

"Yes, yes," said President Brightwell, "but give us two weeks in Europe and we'll be able to make some money."

CONFLICTING STATEMENTS.

Contradictions again cropped out when he began to discuss capital. Mr. Brightwell admitted that his concern had no money in European banks, although statements have been made to the opposite effect.

Asked concerning statements by Fred Meyers, his sales manager, regarding "the large business interests" of the Old Colony in Europe, President Brightwell said, "Well, that isn't so."

He declared agents were instructed to tell investors the truth. To prove this assertion he exhibited a placard hung in the office, insisting on the truth, and threatening dismissal in case of violation of the rule.

He further admitted that agents had told investors that their money could be claimed in forty-five days, although the notes read six months.

Asked finally what he intended to do about payment, Brightwell said: "I'll not pay back most of these notes before maturity. I'll make them stick by their contracts, unless they convince me that they weer deceived by my agents."

And "Ponzi's rival" again referred to the gigantic business which his company "planned" to do in Europe, and the speedy returns he expected.

President Brightwell dhano thing to tell newspaper men today of G. R. A. Lindblatt, the "mystery man" and real wonder worker of the concern. Mr. Lindblatt is on his way to Europe, according to earlier statements, to lay the foundations of that now insolvent business which is to pay investors $100 per cent. in six months.

Wednesday, when a Boston American reporter went to the company's office and offered a mythical $500 as an investment he was told by one of its officials, a man who represented himself as Fred Meyers, that the company "has thousands of dollars in banks in Europe and is doing a tremendous business in everything from a spool of thread to a Babcock machine."

Brightwell was asked: "You say that you have not yet done any business in Europe; how is it that Mr. Meyers is telling prospective investors that you are engaged in a big business?"

He answered: "Mr. Meyers is only our sales manager. He knows nothing at all about our business. We have instructed our agents to tell only the truth."

BRIGHTWELL FORMER PROMOTER.

Yet this same Meyers was the man to whom the reporter was referred when he presented himself at the company's office to ostensibly make an investment.

Brightwell is a former stock promoter. He acknowledges that he was at one time president of the Langdon Oil & Gas Company of Kansas. Very little is known of him in Boston, although he states that he has lived here a year and a half.

Laymond M. Myers, a trustee, was a former shoe buyer for a downtown department store. G. R. A. Lindblad, another trustee, who is now on his way here from Europe, is a naturalized Swede. According to Brightwell, Lindblad was formerly a secretary for a large rubber tire company.

PROMISES HUGE PROFITS.

Fred Meyers, the sales manager of the company, had previously told the reporter that the company was not to deal in international coupons or foreign exchange. Brightwell contradicted him, saying: "There are still thousands upon thousands to be made in Europe in international coupons and stamps. There is also considerable to be made in the purchase of municipal, water and similar bonds. We intend to make thousands for our clients through these agencies."

"Do you mean to say," he was asked, "that you can give your note, promising to pay back 100 per cent. and thus guarantee that you can take the money to Europe and make 100 per cent. in six months?"

"Yes, he answered, "we shall be able to pay our clients that much, pay our expenses and make a handsome profit besides."

The agents, for the most part, are Americanized foreigners. They have been soliciting funds from their countrymen, many of whom cannot speak English, and are paid 5 and 10 per cent. on all money brought to the company's coffers. While the American reporter was in the office he saw one agent bring in a stack of twenty-dollar bills five inches thick.

The statement which Brightwell made in answer to the District Attorney's warning, follows:

"The Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company is operating under a declaration of trust which is on file at City Hall and with the Commission of Corporations. The principal purpose of the company is to buy, sell and deal in foreign exchange, foreign stamps, bonds, bills, money, notes and all other evidence of indebtedness and also to buy, sell and deal in all kinds of property for export and import.

One of the trustees is G. R. A. Lindblad. Mr. Lindblad was born in Sweden about thirty-five years ago. He has been naturalized in this country. For many years he has been connected with various concerns in Europe, principally in connection with foreign business. He is an expert accountant and an expert in foreign exchange and foreign business generally. He speaks five languages.

FORMING FIRM ABROAD.

"For a number of months he has been building up an organization in different countries of Europe for the purpose of dealing in foreign exchange, in foreign security and foreign merchandise.

"He has stated to me that within a period of two weeks, and oftentimes much sooner, a deal in foreign exchange or securities can be carried out. As is well known, the rates of exchange in the various countries of Europe fluctuate sometimes to a considerable amount per day. He claims that with a good organization on the ground opportunities exist all the time for very profitable business. He understood before he sailed the amount of interest that we expected to pay in the beginning and assured us that that would be done with safety and yet a very large profit could be left for the company.

100 PER CENT. IS TEMPORARY.

"I have known Mr. Lindblad for over six years and have had business dealings with him. I am convinced that he is honest and that he is a good, bright business man.

"He is expected to arrive in Europe from the United States this week.

"The company does not expect to continue to pay the present rate of interest, but plans to change it from time to time according to the condition of things in Europe. Later the company may sell interest in the present company or in some allied company.

"There are opportunities for those on the ground in Europe to buy good securities at a very low figure and to sell them in this country, or elsewhere, at a large profit. Later the company plans also to buy and sell merchandise in foreign trade.

AUTO PLUNGES OFF FERRY, GIRL DROWNED

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Aug. 13.—Miss Mary King, twenty-year-old daughter of Philip King of Fitzdale, was drowned in the Connecticut River when an automobile carrying six passengers plunged off a small ferry into 15 feet of water.

The driver of the machine thought its gears were in neutral, but when he released the clutch the gears were in second speed and the car lurched forward off the ferry. Mr. and Mrs. John Lavorgna, his brother, who was engaged to Miss King, and another girl were in the car.

WOMAN GETS HOME BY WAY OF FIRE LADDER

Mrs. Michael Phillips, who lives on the top floor of a three-story tenement at No. 3 Shaw street, Quincy, was forced to call the fire department before she could get into her home. When she returned from a shopping trip she discovered that she had forgotten her key. The firemen came with an extension ladder.

FORCED TO CUT INTO SHIP.

The fire was particularly stubborn to fight. That it might receive proper ventilation members of the fire department were forced to go down the side of the ship on a ladder and cut out one of the plates with an acetylene torch.

Chief Officer Hurley found the fire today after Second Officer Hudgins reported to him that he detected a strong odor of smoke. Hurley went down to open the lower No. 2 hold. He was greeted with a burst of flame, smoke and gas.

He toppled over with the first rush of fumes and was at once dragged into the air by Hudgins, who sounded the alarm. Ladder 8, with Engine 25, was the first piece of apparatus to respond to the still alarm.

Then it was that the fireman began toppling. The rescue company came with additional gas masks and every fireman who entered the hold was equipped with one of them.

FIND MAN UNCONSCIOUS.

A member of the rescue company working in the hold came across the unconscious form of Superintendent Thompson, who had been below assisting in the work. He was carried to the wharf, where doctors and other firemen went to work on him.

When he regained consciousness he insisted on returning to his quarters rather than to a hospital.

Deputy Chief Fox followed him ashore time later.

The Ontario left Baltimore Monday night with a general cargo and docked here last night. It is supposed the fire had been smouldering since the sailing from Baltimore. The cargo was valued at approximately $750,000 and the loss estimated at $25,000.

ENGLAND WILL FINALLY GIVE UP PALESTINE, SAYS NORDAU

NOTED WRITER CLAIMS ZION MUST PLACATE ARABS

By DR. MAX NORDAU.

Copyright, 1920, by Dr. Max Nordau.
Written for the Boston American.

We Jews are a nervous race and easily given to exaggeration.

When the letter addressed by Mr. Balfour to Lord Rothschild on November 2, 1917, since become famous as the "Balfour Declaration," became known to the world, reading that the then British Secretary for Foreign Affairs promised "the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for Jewish People," there was an outburst of enthusiasm all over the world such as seldom, if ever, had been seen before.

The manifestations of delirious joy repeated themselves, if possible more exuberantly, when the magic sentence of Mr. Balfour was literally introduced in the Peace Treaty with Turkey drafted at San Remo in April last.

Zionists had particular reason to rejoice. I, as the author of the Basle program adopted by the first Zionist congress held at Basle in 1897, and summing up the aims of the Zionist movement and the means by which to attain them, could only be deeply gratified to see the opening paragraph of my draft taken over, without the slightest alteration, into a diplomatic instrument of the highest importance signed by almost all the powers of the world.

HERZL WAS OUTSPOKEN.

Skeptics asked at once, not without an ironical twinkling of the eyes, what the exact meaning of "a national home for the Jewish people" was. I knew perfectly well what I meant when I wrote these words. The creator of modern Zionism, my lamented friend Theodor Herzl, had been much outspoken. With bold frankness, he gave the book which he published in 1896, and which was the starting point of the Zionist movement, the title, "The Jewish State." That was what he had in view, what he aimed at, and he made no secret of it. His purpose was to repeat the exploit of Biblical Ezra and Nehemiah, to gather together the Jewish people dispersed among the nations, to lead them back to the land of their ancestors, and to restore to them, after eighteen centuries, their independent State which the Roman Legions of Titus had destroyed.

But Herzl, when he wrote his sensational book, was an independent man of letters. He gave merely his own individual views. He was free to indulge in day dreams and could by nobody be taken to task for them.

A DIFFERENT SITUATION.

A year later the situation was different. The Basle Congress had the pretention of representing the Jewish people. The program I was called upon to compose was an expression of the will of a responsible collectivity. I had the duty of being cautious and of weighing every word. In 1897 the Ottoman Empire did still exist; Palestine was one of its provinces; although weak and tottering, it was yet strong enough to be redoubtable to those of its subjects who incurred its displeasure.

The unhappy Armenians were there as a deterring example; 300,000 Jews lived in Turkey who were as many hostages in the hands of the Ottoman Government, and whose life and property we had no right to jeopardize by a reckless act for which they might have been made to pay by their cruel rulers.

I was, therefore, careful to avoid the expression "Jewish State" which would have been a declaration of war against Turkey, as at that time revolt, war and conquest would have been the only means of wrenching off a province from the Empire. I chose the words "Homestead for the Jewish people in Palestine guaranteed by the international law," which sounded harmless and could give no umbrage to the government of Constantinople, while we at the Congress understood perfectly what we had in mind, and were careful to make it clear unostentatiously, but unequivocally, to the Jewish adherents of the new movement.

ADOPTED THE FORMULA.

Now the British government, and on its recommendation the peace conference, have adopted our formula for their promise of Palestine to the Jewish people. We were weak in 1897, and the most elementary discretion obliged us to attenuate carefully the manifestation of our inmost thought.

England and her allies and associates had not the same reasons for being cautious in 1917, on the occasion of the Balfour declaration, and in 1920, when they drafted the peace treaty of San Remo. They were free to define with all precision the exact limits of the concession they were willing to grant us. They judged convenient to offer us what our program of 1897 asked for.

We have no right to complain when seemingly we obtain all we had declared to stand for. But, of course, the same words have not the same bearing when pronounced by different speakers, and it remains to be seen whether the British government gives the "National Home for the Jewish people" the same interpretation as we did when we set up the Basle program.

MIGHT MEAN ANYTHING.

I do not conceal from myself that the expressions employed in the Turkish peace treaty might mean anything from a condescending permission to picked Jews to enter Palestine and settle there as tolerated guests, to an unreserved recognition of the right of the Jews to emigrate without restraint in the land, to take possession of every part of its soil which is not indisputably owned by an individual proprietor, and to constitute after a reasonable transitional period of British administration an independent, sovereign Jewish state, received on terms of equality in the society of nations.

I am convinced British diplomacy has made use of calculatedly elastic expressions in order to be free to extend or narrow their meaning according to the willingness and capacity of the Jews for carrying out the task Great Britain expects us to accomplish.

It is not difficult for us to understand what this task consists in. The history of the Balfour Declaration has been overgrown with a luxurious vegetation of legends invented, spread and entertained by people who had personal interest in making believe that at a given moment of the World War they had sought and found means to approach the leading statesmen of England and France to lay before them the hopes and desires of the Jewish people, and to plead with them magnificently, convincingly, for the recognition of its claims to Palestine at the conclusion of the war which they, with an almost supernatural gift of prophecy, foresaw would end in the triumph of the Allies and the breaking up of the Ottoman Empire. This is pure fiction. The facts are widely different.

FACTS IN THE CASE.

When Turkey unnecessarily, foolhardily precipitated herself into the war, the Allied statesmen resolved to put an end to her anachronic existence, at least in Europe and in all Asiatic provinces not populated with genuine Turks. England won the Arabs over to her side by entering into a treaty with them which permitted the Sheriff of Mecca, Hussein, to proclaim himself King of Hedjaz, and held out to his son, Feisal the prospect of carving out of the Turkish territory one more Arab State, Syria, of which he in due time would become the ruler.

Nor was this all. The Allied governments had some knowledge of the Zionist movement. I myself had on December 5, 1913, a conversation of more than an hour with M. Pichon, then, as again afterward, during the war, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, and informed him minutely of the history of Zionism, of its program, of its moral and material reasons, its immediate aims and its more distant hopes. He remembered my visit three years afterward, in 1916, when the Palestine campaign under General Allenby had begun.

The French Commissioner with the Allied forces, M. Picot, was instructed by his Foreign Office to put himself at once in communication with the British colleague, Mr. Sykes, and to initiate together with him an action which was to awaken in the Jews the hope that they might be rewarded with Palestine if they made an effort to aid the Allies in winning the war. The French Government desired particularly to impress the American and Russian Jews, the two most important sections of the Jewish people, so that with their influence they should uphold and defend the cause of the Allies in their countries.

AMERICA STILL NEUTRAL.

Remember that at that time the United States were still neutral, that partisans and adversaries of the participation of America in the war fought hard for their ideas, and that the Jews could throw into the balance a weight by no means negligible.

In Russia also, after the crushing defeat of Rennenkampf in the district of the Masurian Lakes and the German occupation of Poland, public opinion wavered and inclined toward a separate peace, and that it was of great importance that the four millions of Russian Jews—without those of Poland—should stand firm for the continuation of the war and loyalty to the Allies.

Mr. Sykes laid M. Picot's suggestion before his government, which immediately seized upon its value and looked out for authorized Jews with whom to get in touch and to negotiate efficiently with the object of realizing at least the moral, and, if possible, even to a certain extent the material co-operation of the Zionists in the Allied and neutral countries with the English and French action.

This aim was splendidly achieved. The English and French statesmen, after some search in London and Paris, found Zionists who were overglad to enter into their views and to accept eagerly whatever was promised them by way of Palestinian possibilities, without venturing to ask for anything positive, let alone to formulate conditions.

It was all a one-sided bargain. The Allies spontaneously held out hopes, the few Zionists received them thankfully, and the Jews in all the Allied and neutral countries learned with enthusiasm that in a certain manner they had become allies of England for her enterprise in Near Asia.

The news was received with great sympathy by a large majority of the English people also. Englishmen are, as a rule, believing Christians nurtured with Biblical lore. To them "the establishment of a National Home for the Jewish people in Palestine" means the return of the chosen people to its land of promise—that is to say, the fulfilment of one of the most striking prophecies of the Holy Writ, awakening deep emotions of faith.

Responsible statesmen, however, cannot indulge in sentimentalism and mystic speculations. They have to deal with cold and hard facts. They only had to calculate the advantages which the ardent and active sympathies of the Jewish people could procure to their cause and which were the more acceptable as they were not required to pay anything substantial for it.

England makes no sacrifice by promising the Jews Palestine as a National Homeland. She will not annex and retain as a new permanent possession her Palestinian conquest, as the Allies have solemnly declared that they did not wage war for selfish profit. But neither can she abandon the country, which in this case would immediately become the bone of contention between France, claiming it on the strength of a traditional influence exercised through centuries, and the new Arab kingdom proclaimed a few months ago in Damascus and pretending to imply with Syria the whole of Palestine.

Here Zionism very opportunely comes in and presents itself as an outlet for an awkward dilemma. If we Jews undertake to back the British position in Near Asia and to hinder foreign, possibly rival, influences from prevailing there and from entering into conflict with vital interests of the British Empire, we render England a serious service, which is well worth a consideration.

DEPENDS ON THE PEOPLE

The ultimate meaning which England will attach to the Balfour declaration and the San Remo decision will entirely depend on the extent to which the Jews show themselves capable of becoming a strong and unconditional reliable asset in the world policy. If the experience of some years of the exercise of her mandate over Palestine proves to her convincingly that the settling of Jews in large numbers in the land of their ancestors does not add to her military and financial burden, but on the contrary makes it easier to bear, England will, I have no doubt whatever, eventually withdraw from Palestine, recognize it as an autonomous polity and assert only her right of considering it as a "sphere of influence."

In this case the ideal of Zionism will be fully, and I may say gloriously, realized. But if, from lack of energy and of readiness for financial sacrifice, we are slow in taking effective possession of the land; if, from want of cleverness, we miss the opportunity of becoming largely, indisputably preponderant by our numbers, by our economical success, by our cultural creations, by our moral superiority and by our social righteousness; if, through absence of political tact we stir up trouble with the Arab inhabitants and force England to a military effort against them, she will unhesitatingly give her declarations the narrowest interpretation consistent with her reputation for loyalty to her pledged word, and individual Jews will perhaps be able to found a home for themselves in Palestine, but the Jewish people collectively will be as distant from its aim of living a normal national life in its own independent homeland as it ever was during the Ottoman rule over Palestine.

In short England is ready to give us Jews Palestine as our own possession if we can turn it to good use for her and for ourselves but we have nothing to hope from her if by our own fault we render her task in the Near East more difficult and expose her to complications with the Arabs. Our fate is in our hands, and it depends essentially on the relations we shall be able to establish with the Arabs.

BANDIT POSES AS POLICEMAN

Flees When Asked to Go to Station; Trailed Autoist Through Charlestown

Posing as a policeman in civilian clothes and aided by an accomplice in an automobile, a hold-up man attempted to rob the occupants of an automobile owned by David Huntley of No. 127 East Emerson street, Melrose, while the machine was on Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, outside the State Prison wall.

The appearance of the "policeman" did not satisfy Huntley and he ordered his chauffeur to proceed to City Square police station. He was followed by the hold-up man and his accomplice in an auto. At City Square the robber jumped on the running board of the Huntley machine and demanded to see the chauffeur's license, claiming he was a special officer attached to Station 1.

When Huntley requested him to accompany him to the station the stranger jumped from the running board and ran towards the B. & M. Railroad yards in the rear of the Waverly House and escaped from a number of persons who took up the chase.

BRIDGEWATER BANDITS TO BE SENTENCED MONDAY

Plymouth, Aug. 13.—Disposition of the cases of Bartolomeo Vanzetti of Plymouth and Pasquale Catramboni of Brockton are expected to be made at the special sitting of the Plymouth Superior Court which opens here Monday with Judge Webster Thayer of Worcester presiding. Vanzetti was convicted of attack with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill and rob at Bridgewater, December 24, 1919. Catramboni will make a plea of murder in the second degree, which it is understood, will be accepted by the Commonwealth. He is charged with killing police officer George J. B. Guyette of Brockton, by shooting.

'FISH SHOOTER' HELD IN BOSTON GIRL'S DEATH

Worcester, Aug. 13.—George Stankaitis, aged seventeen, of Sutton, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Esther Portnoy, No. 33 Myrtle street, Boston, is held in $500 bonds to await action by the grand jury. Stankaitis is said to have fired the shot which killed the Boston girl at Lake Singletary, Sutton, Sunday afternoon. He admitted firing the shot but claims he did not mean any harm to the Boston girl who was in a boat. He claims to have been shooting at fish leaping from the water.

COAL CAR ORDER HITS NEWSPAPERS

New York, Aug. 13.—Unless the Interstate Commerce Commission modifies its priority orders in allocating coal and wood cars, a large number of newspapers throughout the United States will have to suspend publication, according to Philip T. Dodge, president of the International Paper Company.

Mr. Dodge says enforcement of the priority orders will mean that production and shipment of print paper must cease through lack of rail equipment to deliver their fuel and pulp wood.

"LADY KILLER" BANDITS ROB MANY IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Aug. 13.—"Lady-killer bandits" was the title conferred by the authorities on two handsomely dressed men in a big automobile who swung through the fashionable Oak Park suburb, robbing indiscriminately. The bandits were accompanied by three girls, who giggled as victims were forced to hand over their valuables.

Half a dozen persons complained of having been held up by the "lady-killer" bandits.

Impressions of Artist Moynahan at the cattle show in Sharon

Lesnessocks Gem Good Gift of Glen Hill Farm, Sharon, was acclaimed regent of Ayrshire cattle at the annual meeting of the New England Ayrshire Club held at Glen Hill as the guests of Charles F. Riordan.

The big $25,000 bull, who weighs 2,200 pounds, bellowed his approbation of the judges, following the close of the club session field day and clam bake.

More than a hundred members and guests of the club admired the scenery from Mr. Riordan's hill-top home before the ringing of a bell announced that the annual luncheon of Ayrshire members was in readiness.

Present were the foremost men of the association which has established the breed of famous cattle first in New England and thence throughout the United States.

It was Ayrshire Day.

Down in the big tile-roofed stable a herd of daughters of Lessnessocks Gem and kindred sire, watched furtively Glen C. Sevey, who passed judgment upon the feminine, as well as masculine members of the stable household.

James G. Watson, secretary of the National Ayrshire Association, explained the reasons why the breed became so generally in favor among dairymen in this country.

Charles E. Hatfield of Center Harbor, New Hampshire, officiated as toastmaster. He first introduced Mr. Riordan, who, as host, made the address of welcome.

Mr. Riordan told how he had built up the magnificent herd of cattle and the certified dairy stable of Glen Hill Farm.

"I was my own architect and building director," said Mr. Riordan, "and if there is anyone dissatisfied with the barn, they can blame me."

Lieutenant-Governor Channing H. Cox and Colonel W. A. Gaston also addressed the gathering.

COOLIDGE LAUDS WOMEN OF U. S.

'Will Exert Mighty Influence in Campaign' Hinging on 'Home' Issues

Governor Coolidge told the Republican Club of Massachusetts at a dinner given in his honor at the Hotel Somerset that the coming election would turn "not on world politics, but on affairs at home."

"The wives and mothers of the land will directly or indirectly exert a mighty influence in the campaign," he said. "They believe in patriotism and common sense."

"Referring to campaign promises," he said, "no man and no party ought to promise performances long in advance," and ridiculed the "promising of the earth" so common on the part of office seekers.

The vice-presidential candidate paid high tribute to his running mate, Senator Harding. He termed him a "sound man, one tried in the fire of public service, unwarped and unafraid."

He urged national economy, and an end of the "prodigal wastefulness" prevalent in private life and public administration.

His address roused his hearers to fervent demonstrations of approval, and the meeting was in all respects a love-feast.

LABOR ENRICHED FIGHTS BACK

Contests Open Shop Idea by Buying Up Mortgages on Many Plants

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Organized labor has a new program to fight the open shop movement—a program that calls for discarding the usual weapons and adoption of tactics intended to demonstrate labor's power to take over industry.

The International Machinists' Association, third largest union in the American Federation of Labor, has already put this new program into operation.

Backed by a defence fund amounting to $5,200,000 annually and with other financial resources to draw from, this union is buying up outstanding mortgages and notes against concerns which have declared lockouts against organized labor and is establishing co-operative plants to compete with the anti-union firms.

"It is now a war of the money power of labor versus the money power of capital," E. C. Davison, general secretary-treasurer of the union, said today.

"We have compelled the iron masters to sign agreements with us in every city in the South, with the exception of Norfolk, Va.

In Norfolk we bought up the mortgages and notes standing against one of the largest machine plants. We now control this plant and have purchased two others.

"The law cannot interfere with these new tactics we have adopted.

"What we are demonstrating is that labor has unlimited financial resources; that it need have no fear when employers talk of raising millions to fight it. Organized labor can raise millions and more quickly and simply than the employers."

SUGAR DROPS OVER 3 CENTS IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 13.—Sugar prices in this city have taken a decided drop. One large retail dealer reduced the price of fine granulated from 21 cents to a fraction over 17 cents a pound. Raw sugar sold at 13 2-5 cents, a decrease of 10 cents a pound as compared with the listed price of three months ago.

Boston sugar dealers today denied that a drop in the price of that commodity was imminent. They declared that sugar for the rest of August, the whole of September and part of October had been contracted for at 22½ cents a pound.

DR. MORTON'S NAME FOR HALL OF FAME

Dr. George W. Gay, senor surgeon of the Boston City Hospital and former president of the Massachusetts Medical Society, in token of his profession's appreciation of Dr. W. T. G. Morton, who brought surgical anaesthesia into use, has requested the Senate of the University of New York to place Dr. Morton's name in the Hall of Fame in New York.

Newburyport Girl Drowns

Newburyport, Aug. 13.—Anna Fowler, aged 14, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Fowler of No. 9 Salem street, this city, was drowned while bathing in the Merrimac River, near Long Wharf. The police made an unsuccessful attempt to recover the body.

FEED NERVES PLENTY OF PHOSPHATE IN SUMMER

Keen-Minded Men, Energetic and Successful Rely on It, Asserts Prominent N. Y. Physician

Bitro-Phosphate a Godsend

Men and women, nervous and fretful, easily upset and often fatigued, need plenty of organic phosphate, and the sooner they heed this advice the better their health will be.

In every one of the millions of cells that make up your body, phosphorus is a most important part.

Your nervous system, your brain, your blood and even your bones must have a sufficient supply of phosphorus or weariness, nervousness and a general run-down condition, as well as lack of normal mental power, is sure to result.

Big men of affairs—mighty men who control industries because of sheer will power and nervous force, know this, or, if they don't, are clever enough to have a physician who does.

Physicians more and more are realizing that Bitro-Phosphate, as dispensed at drug stores, is a necessity to over forty per cent. of men and women, because present day foods do not contain enough phosphate to give the body and especially the nervous system the supply it needs.

Speaking on this very subject, Dr. Frederick S. Kolle, Editor-in-Chief of Physicians' "Who's Who," and a nationally known author of medical text books, in a most emphatic statement said:

"If I had my way, Bitro-Phosphate should be prescribed by every doctor and used in every hospital."

Later, Dr. Kolle said: "When the nerve tissue begins to lose its vitality, woman begins to lose her youth and vivaciousness. Her lively, pleasant disposition fades away—she becomes irritable, uncompanionable, moody and despondent. It would indeed be a godsend if more men and women were aware of the efficacy of Bitro-Phosphate."

Hot weather is dreaded by men and women who are weak, thin, nervous, timid and lacking in vigorous development because it saps their vitality almost to the breaking point.

To all such people Bitro-Phosphate is recommended because it is the one organic phosphate which, when absorbed by the system, will supply the element necessary for a vigorous, healthy body free from any suggestion of weakness or disordered nerves.

Your druggist has Bitro-Phosphate in the original package with complete instructions for best results.

OLYMPIC RULES HIT YANKEE ATHLETES

FOUR MEN IN EACH EVENT

American Protest on Canadian Hurdler Denied—Big Parade Planned

By JACK VEIOCK.

Antwerp, Aug. 13.—The report of the American Olympic committee protesting the entry of Earl Thomson, the Canadian hurdler, has been denied, but the committee may lodge another protest against the entry of the Canadian boxers.

The King and Queen of Belgium, Prince Leopold and Princess Marie will attend the Olympic games from Saturday until Tuesday, a great celebration having been arranged for the royal family.

The American team trained yesterday at Middelheim Park.

Sunday's Olympic schedule includes the javelin throw, the 800-metre run, the 100-metre dash and the 400-metre hurdles.

The American and Swedish teams were annoyed today by the Olympic rules committee's decision to allow any nation only four starters in each event, although six places will score points.

The awards for the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth places respectively are: Seven, five, four, three, two and one. There will be no penalty for false starting.

Harry Stenfquist of Sweden won the individual 170 kilometer bicycle race of the Olympic games competition in 4 hours 40 minutes 2 3-5 seconds. South Africa took second place and France third.

In the bicycle team race, over the same distance, France was first, Sweden second and Belgium third.

American entrants failed to win a point.

American Athletes in Fine Condition

By "TED" MEREDITH.

Antwerp, Aug. 13.—The American athletes who will compete in the 800 and 1,000-metre races have finished their training and are now ready for the first heats, which start on the opening day of the Olympic games.

Things, all around, are taking on better shape here now. Many new arrivals were out today.

The Swedish contenders made their appearance with a large team, as also did the South Africans. Ernie Hjertberg, the Swedish trainer, seemed most pleased with the showing of his men and hurled a mild defi in the direction of the American camp when he declared that the United States can expect more competition than they have had in any other Olympiads.

U. S. Marathoners Run Over Full Course

Our Marathoners went the full distance in a trial run. They had walked over the course before. They were tired and footsore at the finish.

Hannes Kohlemainen, here to represent Finland, is running better than when he left New York.

The climate just suits him and I would not be surprised to see him a winner. He tells me that the Finns have a man—Nurmi—who is a wonder over the 5,000 and 10,000 meter distances.

OLYMPIC STARS AT BIG LEGION GAMES

Philadelphia, Aug. 13. — American victors at the Olympic games will be contestants in the events of the American Legion Field Day to be held at Franklin Field, University of Pennsylvania, on September 18 under the auspices of the Philadelphia posts according to present arrangements.

Earl Eby, the University of Pennsylvania runner and a member of the Legion, who is entered in the Olympic games, has been delegated to sign up all the winners for the Legion meet. A reception committee representing the American Legion and the city of Philadelphia will meet the returning athletes at New York to escort them to this city.

MILLIONS IN IT, SAYS RIVERS

Barney Depending on Trusty Right to Put Over His Get-Rich-Quick Idea

By JACK CONWAY.

Barney Rivers has discovered a way to make a million dollars. And he doesn't want common folks who like along in ordinary automobiles and who have to get by with the services of only two or three servants to think he is suffering from the effects of the muggy weather we have been having during the past week.

"I have a million iron men in this hand," said Rivers as he opened up his right bread winner.

We lamped said right-hand without even detecting a jitney and were about to put in a hurry call for the Psychopathic Hospital when our hero once more burst forth with the Daniel Webster stuff.

"I know you can't see any of the hard cash in my mitt," continued the Woonsocket man. "But 'tis only because I haven't cashed in on my plan yet. You see, I've decided to become the featherweight champion of New England. I have won my last eleven starts by knockouts, Bert Jones of Revere and Newport Johnny Brown being numbered among the casualties.

Right Hand Punch Way to Fortune

"A right-hand punch has turned the trick each time. Yes, I see you understand what I meant when I said I had a million dollars in my right hand. I'm going to keep thumping with said right until I have won the featherweight championship of New England. Then I'll go after Johnny Kilbane's title, after which I'll start piling up said million."

"Guess I'll go out and look over a flock of high-powered automobiles." This from Eddie Mack. He is manager of Rivers and apparently has been overcome by his warrior's optimism.

"Anyway," whispered Mack, "he's got a lot of confidence in his own ability, which is a lot more than I can say for some of the fighters I have managed in times past."

Danny Krammer Starts Drive for Fame

Speaking of grabbing a title, Danny Krammer wants all strap hangers to know he is out to relieve Terry Martin as bantamweight champion of New England. Krammer will start his campaign by meeting Paddy Owens of Cambridge in a twelve-round tussle at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night.

Krammer did a lot of tidy fighting around these parts a few years ago. He then hopped out to the Pacific Coast, where he beat all the bantamweights in sight. After winning the bantamweight championship of the Pacific Coast he glided into the ranks of the featherweights. He was just as successful in his encounters with the 122-124-pounders as he had been when meeting the bantams.

"After I get through with Owens I'll be ready to meet Terry Martin," said Krammer today.

Inasmuch as Owens is quite a battler himself, Krammer may have his plans upset.

Nate Siegal of Beachmont will meet Paddy Flynn of Lynn at the same show.

Friedman Would Give Purse to Heroes

Abe Friedman is eager to meet Young Montreal on a winner-take-all basis. To show that he is a regular fellow, Friedman is willing to let his end of the proceeds go to the American Red Cross or to the wounded soldiers stationed at the Army Hospital at Parker Hill.

South Boston Downes to Meet Brockton Winner

The winner of the twelve-round bout between Jimmy Fruzetti and Harry Carlson, which takes place at Brockton on August 21, will be signed to meet South Boston Johnny Downes. The victor of this scrap will be pitted against Frankie (Young) Britt if the latter decides to try out come-back. Matchmaker Billy Goodrich of the Farrington A. A. is eager to clear up the muddle in the New England lightweight division.

Who's Who on the American Olympic Team

WILLIAM MEANIX, B. A. A.

Meanix will be one of the leading candidates for the honors in the 400-meters hurdle race at the Olympic games. In a recent trial he was timed in 55 seconds, which is only a fifth behind the record. Meanix has won the national championship several times.

New York Backing Robson to Win

Over in New York they are picking Tommy Robson to beat Mike O'Dowd in their twelve-round bout at Lawrence a week from Saturday afternoon. Close followers of the fistic game in the big city are of the opinion that O'Dowd won't be able to stand up under the power of Robson's right-hand smashes. Malden Tommy packs a kayo in his right, and he should not experience much trouble in hitting a wide-open fighter like O'Dowd. When champion, Mike refused to meet Robson. He feared the latter's punch. As O'Dowd is out to secure a return match with Johnny Wilson, he could not very well afford to sidestep a legitimate challenger.

Doyle and Powers After Kloby

Met Tony Palozolo today. Said Tony:

"What's the matter with Young Kloby? Is he afraid to meet Paul Doyle? Doyle has gone to Maine to train for several matches I have signed him for. But, of course, we would like to get Kloby. Doyle would beat him sure."

Then we collided with Jim MacDonald. Said Jaimes:

"What's the matter with Young Kloby? Is he afraid to meet Dave Powers? Powers can beat the Y. D. champion any time. Kloby apparently knows this, for he won't give the Malden welterweight a match. Meanwhile Powers is prepared to give battle with any of the other New England welterweights."

DEMPSEY MAY BATTLE HERE

Champion Has Boston Date for October 12—Off for Miske Bout Today

By H. C. HAMILTON.

New York, Aug. 13.—This day—Friday the thirteenth—means very little apparently in the life of Jack Dempsey, for he has designated it as get-away day for Benton Harbor, Mich., where he is scheduled to meet Milly Miske, St. Paul heavyweight, in a ten-round no-decision contest Sept. 6.

After the bout in Benton Harbor the champion may go direct to Boston. Promoters there are angling for his services on Oct. 12 and chances are that they will get him.

Unless he changes his mind Dempsey will start for Chicago late today and from there will go to the Michigan resort to wind up his training in the arena where the bout will be held.

Dempsey is in the very finest condition. Whatever may be said of him, he cannot be charged with not having trained faithfully for his fights. He is ready now to step in and make a hard fight of any encounter.

Game Slated for M Street

BARGAIN BILL AT REVERE OVAL

Keeler and Cobert in Special Sprint Feature; Chapman vs. Wiley and Paced Race

Another bargain bill for the bikers will be staged at the new Revere cycle track tomorrow night with a race and a special sprint match with Keeler lined up against Cobert of Newark, a "dark horse," but who sends this cheerful message that the fans will know him well before the race is over.

In the motor paced race Wiley and Chapman will team up against Madonna and Lavalade, which should furnish the fans with some exciting riding.

MAGOUN SQ. 'CIVICS' WIN ANOTHER TWILIGHT GAME

More than 1,500 fans gathered at the Richard Trum Playground, Somerville, to see the twilight game between the Magoun Square "Civics" and the National Shawmut team. The bank boys failed to appear. The Curtin All-Stars were on hand, however, with "Bob" Laskey of Everett; Lynch the former Mercersburg infielder; Curtin of the Colebrook, N. H. team and other stars. The All-Stars led 2-1 up to the ninth when the Magoun Square boys again showed their gameness and by a fine rally batted over the necessary two runs to clinch the game.

BRITISH GOLFERS MAKE BRILLIANT BATTLE TO WIN NATIONAL

CHICAGO STAR HAS THE EDGE

Hutchinson Only Two Shots to the Good of Vardon and Ray

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Toledo, O., Aug. 13.—A thrilling international finish was assured today when the final 36 holes for the American open golf championship was staged at the Inverness Country Club.

The most celebrated golfers played up to form in the first two rounds of play and were bunched within a few shots of one another at the top of the field.

Many people here believe the real fight for the title will be between Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, the Englishmen, and Walter Hagen, the American open champion.

While Jock Hutchinson, Leo Diegel and Jim Barnes topped the Britons going into the final rounds, it was thought that Hagen, the home-bred champion, would furnish the real fight against the Englishmen in the final round.

Hutchinson Still Leading the Field

Vardon, Ray and Hagen were tied at 147 shots each when today's play started, while Jock Hutchinson led the field at 145, with Diegel and Jim Barnes tied for second. Eddie Loos, at 149; Chick Evans, Jr., and Bob McDonald, at 150, and other good players, such as Bobby Jones, Mike Brady, Freddie McLeod and Louis Tellier, were not so far behind as to be out of the running. A lot can happen in 36 holes.

Golf enthusiasts from many cities came to Inverness today to witness the stars shoot for the title. Automobiles were parked in available space near the club house. The gallery numbered around 6,000.

Vardon and Ray Finish Before Hagen

The draw is such that Vardon and Ray are to complete their rounds before Hagen, and the news of what they did for scores should aid him.

Vardon could not miss anything in the first two rounds. Though he lacked the distance of the younger men, he hit the ball in the centre every time and handled his mashie with as fine a touch as Willie Hoppe uses with a cue. Where the long hitters were getting home in two and three down in two putts, Vardon was shooting his chip shots dead and going down in one putt.

Ray's Driving Is Big Feature

His partner in the present American tour, big Ted Ray, outhit America's longest drivers. His best effort was at the seventh hole, which is 320 yards long. Ray put all his strength behind his tee shot to this hole in the morning and got the green. The ball was better than hole high. Inverness club members said this was the only time the green had been reached from the tee.

Hutchinson opened brilliantly but he lost a little of his fine touch later and hooked too many drives and irons.

West Making Strong Showing in Tournament

Leaving the Britons out of the reckoning there is nothing to the tournament but Westerners. The Western professionals are showing up the Easterners most shamefully. Practically all of the players near the top of the list are at Western clubs and Chick Evans of Chicago has the edge on the amateurs with Bobby Jones, two shots worse and Rudolph Knepper of Sioux City, one shot behind Jones. These three will have a fine fight to lead the amateurs. Jones is favored by many.

There was but one real upset yesterday and that was the failure of Douglas Edgar of Atlanta, holder of the Canadian open title, to maintain the pace he set in the first round when he was 73.

These players led the field at the end of the first thirty-six holes for the National Open Golf championship:

Jock Hutchison, Chicago	69—76—145
Jim Barnes, St. Louis	76—70—146
Leo Diegel, Chicago	72—74—146
Harry Vardon, England	74—73—147

ISSUE SUMMONS FOR McGRAW

Giants' Manager Must Testify Concerning Ride From Lambs' Club With Slavin

New York, Aug. 13.—A subpoena calling upon John J. McGraw, central figure in the Lambs' Club scandal, to appear before District Attorney Swann was served on the Giants' manager, after he had failed to keep his promise to call on the district attorney. McGraw was to have given information concerning the injuries received last Sunday by John C. Slavin, actor.

The authorities know nothing more than when Slavin was first taken to a hospital on Sunday after an exciting ride in a taxicab from the Lambs' Club to McGraw's home, where Slavin was picked up unconscious from the sidewalk. His condition is little better now.

Truth Will Be Learned, Says District Attorney

"It is very apparent that some influence is at work to befuddle the authorities as to how John G. Slavin received his injuries," District Attorney Swann declared. "The truth will be ascertained despite this. The guilty will be punished, if we can get the proof."

Although the council of the Lambs' Club took no action other than to fix September 16 as the date on which McGraw will be "heard," a lengthy meeting of that body was held and the McGraw-Slavin situation reviewed.

McGraw already has been suspended and this suspension will be continued until September 16. The opinion has been expressed that any move to permanently eject the baseball manager would split the club.

CHICAGO JUDGE TO HEAD COMMISSION

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—The new chairman of the National Commission will be Judge McDonald of Chicago, a selection of President Ban Johnson of the American League. This information was obtained from an authentic source here in Cleveland.

Ban Johnson visited Cleveland during the first game of the Yankee-Cleveland series and made the statement that the chairman would be appointed before the next World's series. He also made the announcement, confidentially, that the name of the commissioner-to-be was Judge McDonald of Chicago.

TOLEDO SIDELIGHTS

By ROBERT E. HARLOW

Toledo, O., Aug. 13.—The crowd, and it numbers around 6,000, is glad that Hagen is two shots behind the leader and tied with the Englishmen. What could give the American champion more incentive to show his fighting qualities?

Of course he wants to win. They all want to win. All one has to do is to follow any of the boys that have a possible chance and one will be immediately convinced that a good golfer's ambition is to win the open championship. When a golfer has the title he fights to retain it.

Hagen has the title. It has brought him prominence and popularity as well as plenty of money. He is going back to England again next Summer to take another crack at that elusive British title.

He wants to go back as the American champion. You can bet the limit that Hagen will look his shots over with care and hit them with precision, and that he will do some concentrating on the putting greens.

Hagen lost his smile Thursday. The proposition was a little too strong for him to maintain his usual carefree mannerisms. He played as if he didn't know anyone was there but Hagen struggling to keep up with the dizzy pace that was being set ahead of him by the other cracks. When a man walked in his line of putt at the 18 green, just as he was about to hit the ball, Hagen walked away from it and set himself a second time.

To add to the tenseness of the situation he is tied with none others than the Englishmen. Hagen did not do well at Deal. Ray and Varden finished ahead of him over there in the British open in June. The American champion does not wish Vardon and Ray to finish ahead of him on the home course at Inverness. He will fight.

Harry Vardon has announced that this will be his last visit to America. He cannot retain his wonderful game forever. He is fifty years old. He knows this is his last chance to win in America. Vardon is different from the American professional. He does not quite understand the men who follow the game professionally on this side and if he was perfectly frank he would probably say he was not in love with them and would like to beat them.

Today he not only is Harry Vardon, the great golfer, but Harry Vardon, of England, fighting with one other Englishman, Ted Ray, to put down the enterprising young men of America, most of whom learned to play golf long after he had won more than one important championship. He is in somewhat the same situation that Ted Meredith was in at the Harvard Stadium just before the final heat in the 440-yard dash for places on the American Olympic team. Ted said: "If I have just one burst of the old speed in me I am going to get it out in this race."

Ray is also an Englishman, and as such is as eager as Vardon to break through the American defence. Pat Doyle, paired with Ray, says that the big Briton is perfectly human, that he is whaling his tee shots in this tournament for more distance than he ever did before. Pat says every time Ray smacks one he seems to say:

"There's one for the American delegation to chase after."

Leo Diegel will win the title some day if he keeps at the game. He may win it this time, but it is not likely. Leo offered to bet he would sleep soundly for seven hours Thursday night, but most folks guessed that he wouldn't. Leo said:

"Francis Ouimet was twenty-one when he won this championship. I am twenty-one; I want to win this thing."

He was certainly keyed up. He tried to convince his friends that he was unconcerned and not in the least bit worried, but he was quite a long way from being perfectly natural. Diegel played with the utmost care Thursday. At the tenth tee he took three minutes drying his hands, to make sure his driver would not slip as he swung on the ball. He got all set once, backed away and rubbed his hands on the ground and waved them in order to get them perfectly dry. Then he hit a screamer and said to Clarence Hackney, his partner:

"It pays to take time."

He had gone out in 35. He cracked somewhat coming in and took 41.

Barnes is playing well. He also is within striking distance of this win. Barnes is apt to get too anxious and start pushing some of his long irons off the line to the hole. He is apt to hurry and to become annoyed if things do not move just right. If he does he will lose his chance to beat.

Chick Evans is as cool as any man who is near the top with the possible exception of Ray. Chick plays golf with his wrists, and he works very near perfectly. He is mechanical and at the same time graceful. He has the motions trained and he can go through them when others give way under the championship strain. Chick is dangerous. He might go through.

Bobby Jones has too much temperament. He lost two clubs in his morning round. He is brilliant, as brilliant as any golfer here, but he is still young and gets badly wrought up if a shot goes astray. If Bobby gets away well and does not meet with any unlucky breaks he may set a clip that will bring him near the top. If he hits what he thinks is a perfectly played shot and it goes into a bad lie, or if a well-hit putt lingers on the lip of the cup, it may put him in such a frame of mind that he will beat himself.

There never was a more interesting tournament.

EIGHT PAIRS IN ESSEX GOLF

Fred Wright and Partner Put Out But State Champion Breaks Record

Only eight pairs are left in the field of 116 at the Essex county four-ball tournament. The fourth round and the semi-final rounds were to be played today, the former starting at 10 a. m. and the latter at 2 p. m.

Fred C. Newton and W. C. Chick, the only pair to play from scratch, are still in the competition. The Country club pair have had a comparatively easy time so far and look like the logical winners now that Fred Wright, the State amateur champ, and his partner, J. A. Stockwell, have been eliminated.

A. M. Wright and E. W. Fiske were to meet C. M. Amory and B. W. Estabrook. This was the first round of match play that Wright and Fiske have been in in this tournament.

Although Fred Wright was put out of the running, he had a day which he will long remember with pleasure. In the second round he not only bettered the competitive record for the course by two strokes, but he also scored a hole in one. On the sixth green, 180 yards, he used a brassie and the ball rolled squarely into the cup on the tee shot.

In the third round he did not live up to his morning's play, but even at that, with any luck at all, would have saved the match. By sinking a 30-foot putt on the 14th green Wright went into the lead, one up. The next two were halved, and Holton evened the match on the 17th by getting an eight-foot putt. The 18th was halved and the match went to extra holes. Both Wright and Stockwell were in trouble on their second at the 19th and took 6's and Holton with a five won the match.

BRAVES BACK ON DOUBLE TIME

Stallings' Tribe Slated to Clash With Phillies in Twin Bill Today

The interrupted double-header series was resumed at Braves Field today, the Phillies being the parties of the second part in lieu of the departed Reds, who went away after taking the Braves in tow in an eleven-inning battle by the score of 6 to 5.

Incidentally the champions went into first place, as the pace-making Dodgers succumbed to the Cubs and dropped back into third position.

The Braves hopped on Hod Eller right away and accumulated a pair of markers in the first inning on a double, a single and a triple. Careless work on the paths held down the score and prevented what might should have been a Braves' victory within the regular limit instead of disaster after two overtime periods were played.

Braves Secure Pitcher From Waco, Tex.

The Braves' pitching staff has been augmented by the arrival of Ira B. Townsend, all the way from Weimar, Texas, who comes to the club with all sorts of semi-pro reputation.

He is Texas born and bred, started in baseball on the Weimar High School team and then played in the East Texas League, his first professional engagement, for a portion of its abbreviated season in 1917.

HAWLEY-FOLSOM PLAYS LAWLEY SHIP YARD TEAM

At Town Field, Dorchester, tomorrow afternoon at 3 p. m., Hawley-Folsom of the Boston Business League will play the Lawley ship yard nine, and as both teams are composed of the best semi-pro players in New England a good game is expected. On the Hawley-Folsom team are such well known players as Paul Benson, who pitched for Brockton in the Colonial League; Joe Dee, who was catching for Rocky Point; Abe Blowers, who was with Winchester; Dowd of the Twin State League. "Ed" Byrnes of the Dorchester Club, and Foster Cousens, who was a star at Boston Latin School several years ago.

WEST WALLOPS EAST IN NEWPORT TENNIS

Newport, R. I., Aug. 13.—West proved better than East in the Casino singles. Williams, Washburn, Caner and Voshell left the courts beaten by Johnston, Griffin, Davis and Roberts, respectively.

The only ray of hope left for the East lies in the victory of Harte and Williams, in the doubles. The Boston tennis stars defeated W. F. Johnson and S. W. Pearson, in the semi-final round in straight sets, 7—5, 6—2, 6—3.

INDIANS IN HURRY TO GET NEW SHORTSTOP

New Orleans, La., Aug. 13.—The Cleveland Indians made a special request of the New Orleans team of the Southern Association, asking the local team to send Sewell, the sensational shortstop whom the Indians purchased lately, to Cleveland as soon as possible. The request states that Sewell is needed on the team.

RED SOX TACKLE ATHLETICS TODAY

Philadelphia, Aug. 13.—The Red Sox open with the Phillies today in the first of the three games series. This stop will mark the end of the western trip and the Sox will be home at Fenway Park next week for a long stay.

SAYS ALECKS IS READY TO BATTLE PAL REID

Solly Snyder writes as follows:

"Pal Reid claims he is out of opponents. I have a legitimate middleweight by the name of Johnny Alecks, who hails from South Bethlehem, Pa., who is ready to accommodate Reid. Alecks and Reid fought a sensational twelve-round bout at Jack Leonard's Club in Marlboro a few months back and ever since that contest you couldn't get Pal Reid in the same ring with Alecks.

"Three different clubs are after a Reid-Alecks match. Alecks is a big attraction in Brockton where he made some great battles and with an opponent like Reid a record breaking crowd should witness such a mill in the Shoe City. Billy Goodrich is ready to stage this match in the baseball park in Brockton; Tom Goodwin will stage this contest in the Coliseum A. C. of Quincy and Jack Murphy wants this match for Lynn. It is all up to Reid."

146 ENTER FOR PRIZE SWIM

CHELSEA MAN INVENTS NEW PUNCTURELESS TIRE

The Complex pneumatic tire, which, it is claimed by its inventor, William H. Emeno of Chelsea, will revolutionize the tire industry, is soon to be put on the Boston market. Mr. Emeno claims that his new tire will once and forever remove all tire troubles, such as punctures, blowouts and rim cutting, now being experienced by every driver of automobile apparatus.

In appearance the tire looks no different from the ordinary pneumatic one used on pleasure cars and trucks, but its advantage, as claimed by its inventor, is that it will do away with the carrying of extra shoes, due to the fact that it will be impossible to blow out a shoe of the Complex type.

The construction of the tire involves a specially made shoe, the interior of which contains small cups on either side wall and that part which is on the inner side of the tread. Into these cups are fitted small para rubber balls about two inches in diameter, these extending in series all around the shoe. A specially constructed inner tube, made extra heavy on the tread side and having slight indentations to fit over the rubber balls, is then inserted with the regular breaker strip placed over the tube. When inflated the tube pressure is against the balls and the rim instead of the tread of the shoe and the rim, as in ordinary tires. The new tire is now undergoing a severe road test, the inventor using new and old shoes of the ordinary type to better perfect his invention and give it a thorough tryout before placing it on the market.

In riding the tires show more resiliency and less rebound than ordinary pneumatic tires, and they cling tighter to the road.

"The World and His Wife," soon to be seen in motion pictures at the best theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture from the play by Charles Frederic Nirdlinger, founded on the dramatic verse of Jose Echegaray.

Screen Version Novelized

By Jane McLean

FOR a few moments the man was himself, but not for long; Don Severo appeared in the doorway.

"You will pardon me, my brother, but Ernesto is in the courtyard asking for your wife."

Again the man was seized with the passion that was eating away his soul; so this was the way his wife sought to cajole him. While she lay in his arms her lover was waiting for her.

"Infamous," he almost hurled her to the floor in the force of his anguish.

And Severo smiling, sardonically, saw the breach between husband and wife becoming ocean wide.

Teodora, stumbling to her feet, cowered as one struck too often by the inexorable hand of fate to resist longer. After all there is a limit to endurance, a limit to self sacrifice and a limit to love. She had been flouted and condemned, innocent. What could she do?

Her eyes lighting on the crucifix that hung above her husband's head seemed to read in it a last hope; she leaned forward, seized it and holding it to her bosom swore kneeling that by the cross she was all that her husband would have her be.

"Go out, Severo," said the sick man.

"By the cross, Julian, by my hope of heaven I swear to you that you alone have my heart in your keeping."

Tears came into the eyes of the man weak from illness. "If I could believe you," he muttered.

Don Severo, fearing the result of the interview, silently reappeared.

"Teodora, your lover is waiting for you."

"You are wrong, Don Severo, he is not my lover, and I do not care to see him."

Blind Fool

The sick man raised himself: "But if you are innocent, as you swear you are, you will have no fear of facing him."

"I have no fear, but I do not wish to see him."

"Go to him!" suddenly cried the tortured victim, and as the door closed. "Poor, blind fool; I was nearly convinced. I nearly forgave her."

He sank back, gasping onto his pillow while the brother held his hand and wondered how long even such a powerful frame could withstand these repeated shocks.

In agony Teodora staggered to the patio. "Maria, Maria!" The old nurse came running.

"Carissima."

"My husband has ordered me to see Don Ernesto. Where is he?"

"Carissima, he is in the garden. He came to inquire whether Don Julian was better, and I begged him to go away; Don Severo, the snake, saw him." She put her arms about the trembling figure of her darling and hugged her, knowing the horror that was in her heart.

Ernesto, stepping forward, halted to see Teodora, the woman he admired more than all others, in such anguish.

Scarcely able to speak, she stumbled and found herself caught in his arms.

"I have told him, Ernesto, that we are innocent, but he will not believe me."

He tried to console her. "They would drive you out like a leper, Teodora, and it's all my fault. If I had never come here."

"Yes, yes." She broke away, overcome by the sudden tensity of her grief. "Far better if we had never laid eyes on you. Before you came I was loved by Julian, now he hates me; now I am suspected, then I was trusted," and she pointed to the doorway, as though to tell him to go, never to return.

The young man stood during this ordeal with bowed head, uttering no reproach, no excuse. In his own heart he knew that his presence was to blame for the catastrophes piling fast on the house of Gorgas, but even so he was conscious of his own loyalty to the man who had befriended him.

Seeing the deep distress of Teodora he exclaimed impetuously as though there remained one way to wipe out the past. "I can at least give my life. Death is better than suffering like this."

There was no mistaking his meaning; the girl wife realized that suicide was in his mind, and, forgetting for the moment her own feelings, she moved forward and took his arm.

"No, no, Ernesto, I was overwrought, you are not to blame—I am not to blame—it is the world and his wife who have brought this trouble upon us; the fates must be satisfied."

Never Satisfied

But the fates are never satisfied; jealousy knows no rest. At the moment when Teodora was pleading with the poet not to carry out his purpose, her husband, waving aside the protests of Severo, had wrapped his dressing gown about him and muttering, "They are together, I must watch them," pushed past his brother and tottered down the stairs to spy on his wife.

The other followed and seized his arm. "I will go with you, Julian; you will fall—let me help you." The two walked on together, the one torn with madness, the other fearful, yet triumphant.

"If you love me as a sister," Teodora was crying, "swear you will do yourself no harm."

And as the master of the house and Severo appeared within earshot they heard the young man answering, "I swear by my love for you I will keep my promise."

Straightening himself and throwing off his brother's hand, Julian staggered into the room, pale, menacing; with his own ear he had heard this damning evidence of guilt; nothing more was needed now; futile would be all protestations; he had the evidence of Teodora's falsity from her own lips while she thought he was still on his sick bed.

And in his livid face it was all written. Almost paralyzed with fear to see this dying man, Ernesto, and Teodora gazed, unable to move, like helpless birds fascinated by the eye of the serpent.

Julian stumbled; Severo rushed forward to support him; the sick man pointed an accusing finger at the couple, "Ah, I found you—I have heard you, my wife—whither are you going, traitor, accursed, not even with the decency to wait till the breath is out of my body."

Household Suggestions

Paint and varnish stains on the hands may be easily removed by rubbing grease or lard well into them. Then wash in warm water and soap and the stains will disappear.

White enamel paintwork should not be cleaned with hot water, as this destroys the surface. Use cold water and a very soft leather; dry well, and wipe down again with another soft cloth and polish with a dry leather.

* * *

Instead of throwing away used corks, keep them in a jar with a little paraffin, and they will be found a great help when lighting fires. Orange and lemon peel, when dried, also quickly ignites.

* * *

A dust cover for an upright piano, tacked to the back of the instrument, will be found very useful. The cover should be wide enough to cover the piano and be thrown over it when sweeping. When not in use the cover may hang down behind the piano, wholly out of sight.

The Adventures of Ann

"You will not, you will not!"

CHAPTER 3.

AFTER meeting Ann in the hallway of the building in which she lived, John Harwood kept thinking of her big brown eyes and her singing. He was sitting in his luxurious apartment, the wonderful, silent place that, while in the heart of the big, pulsing city, was like a thing apart from it. The rugs so thick and soft that a footfall made no sound. The lights seemed to spring from nowhere in the high ceilings. An electric fountain of changing colors played in the centre and its murmur was the only sound to break the stillness. Few people knew of this mysterious place, for Harwood was very careful whom he asked there.

John Harwood, who was known from coast to coast as one of the wealthiest men in the country, and also what he was NOT known as, one of the most selfish and cruel. He was lost in deep thought, for he was thinking of his chance of meeting Ann.

He told his valet to get a certain number on the phone. When he was connected he told the party at the other end of the line: "There is something I want you to do for me. I am coming to see you at once to tell you what it is." The big car caused much comment and envy as it stood in front of the apartment house in which Ann lived. John Harwood went up the stairs to the home of the mysterious woman who lived on the top floor.

The woman who opened the door for him was still beautiful, but Harwood seemed oblivious of her appearance.

"I've something I want you to do. Understand? Pull yourself together, get acquainted with that girl on the second floor, the one with the big brown eyes who sings so well. Fix it up so I can meet her."

At this the woman's eyes narrowed and her brows contracted as she said to him: "You will not, you will not try to know that young girl. Never! I won't do it."

"You WILL do it, and at once," Harwood told her, "or your allowance stops. Oh, you will do it all right. By the end of the week I expect word from you. If I were in your place I wouldn't fail," he remarked as he left her looking imploringly after him.

THE RESTLESS SEX

CHAPTER XIX.—Continued

"EVERYBODY was yelling for the simple life, summoning the nation back to nature, demanding that babies be produced in every family by the dozen, extolling procreation and lauding the American woman. Thats the sort of female we celebrated and pretended to want. Now, look at what we've got!—a nation of dancing dolls! A herd of restless, brainless, aggressive, impudent women proclaiming defiance and snapping their fingers at us!

"What's your other name, Spink?—Jeremiah?" asked Cleland, laughing.

"No. I'm merely on my favorite topic. Listen to me, my young friend, all England faces strikes and political anarchy in Ireland and India; the restless sex is demanding its rights in London and menacing the Empire.

"France, betrayed by one of the restless ones, strangling in the clutch of scandal, is standing bewildered by the roar of the proletariat; Russia seethes internally, watching the restless Empress and her accursed priest out of millions of snaky, Asiatic eyes; Portugal has just fallen crashing into fragments around a terrified Queen; China splits open from end to end and vomits forth its dynasty on the tomb of the dead Dowager; Austria watches for the death of an old, old widower—an imperial mummy long since dead in mind and spirit.

And in Our Own Land

"And here in our once great Republic of the West, the fever of universal unrest is becoming apparent in this nation-wide movement for suffrage. State after State becomes a battle ground and surrenders; accepted standards are shattered, the old social order and balance between the sexes—all the established formalism and belief of a man-constructed status—totters as door and gate and avenue and byways are insanely flung open to the mindless invasion of the restless sex!

And he took himself off, yawning.

The rushing din of the orchestra far below came up softened to Stephanie's ears, where she stood at the rail of the topmost gallery and looked down into the glimmering depths of the ball of all the gods.

Then, in this hilarious circle, Stephanie caught sight of the snubnose and transparent raiment of the button-eyed Goddess of Night, and next her, hand clasping hand, she recognized Cleland as another link in the rapidly rotating ring.

Breathless with laughter, the Grecian gods galloped round and round in a dizzy circle, flushed faces flashed past Stephanie, flying draperies and loosened hair fluttered and streamed and glimmered in confused sequence before her angry eyes.

Suddenly the mad dance broke up and flew into fragments, scattering its reeling, panting devotees into prancing couples in every direction.

And straight into this wild confusion stepped Stephanie, her pretty eyes brilliant with wrath, her face a trifle pale.

"Jim!"

He let go of Lady Button-eyes in astonishment and turned around.

Stephanie said very coolly:

"If you're going to raise the devil, raise him with me, please!"

Lady Button-eyes was not pleased and she showed it by stamping, which alone had sufficiently fixed her level if she had not also placed both hands on her hips and laughed scornfully when Cleland took leave of her and walked over to Stephanie.

"Where are the others?" he inquired, rather red at being discovered with such a crew. "You're not alone, are you, Steve?"

"Not now," she said sweetly, and passed her left arm through his and clasped her right hand over it.

Laughed Excitedly.

"Now," she said with an excited little laugh, "I am ready to raise the devil with you. Take me wherever you like, Jim."

The insulted gods gazed upon her with astonishment as she lifted her small head and sent an indifferent glance like an arrow at random among them. Then, not further noticing them, and absolutely indifferent to the button-eyed one, she strolled leisurely out of Olympus with her slightly disconcerted captive and disappeared from their view along the southern corridor.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1920, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WE decided to make a picnic out of the Sunday trip to the country place Tom was thinking of buying.

"I'll furnish the car," said Tom when he phoned me about it on Saturday, "and have my housekeeper pack a hamper of lunch. All you have to do, Donna Anna, is gather together the congenial crowd. Young Neal and Phoebe, I'd suggest, and Pat—if he'll come."

"You don't seem to have left me much to do even in the line of furnishing the crowd," I replied. "Come now—there's a catch in it somewhere. What is it? What's my share in the division of labor?"

"Oh, the car holds seven. So you might furnish a girl. A lonely bachelor maid to cheer the lonely bachelor," said Tom.

"All right," I agreed gayly, forgetting that my list of bachelor girls consisted briefly of Carlotta and Daisy. Then I added, "Where are you phoning from?"

On Tom's replying unsuspiciously that he was at the downtown studio, I promptly called the uptown studio where Daisy was in charge and invited her. Her reply astonished me:

"Anne, you are wonderful to ask me—to treat me as if nothing had happened. But I can't come. I can't face your husband yet."

I didn't protest, for her tone conveyed clearly how remorse and shame were overwhelming Daisy. So she probably didn't want to see me either. I determined to keep on inviting her out as if nothing had occurred and so finally wear down the acute edges of her misery.

When I asked Carlotta, it turned out that both she and Pat were booked for a house party some Sturgis cousins were giving. So there seemed no one else to ask in their places, and we had to rest content with a party of five.

Unexpected Callers

On Sunday morning, as I was putting the last touches to my picnic costume, Hedwig came to the door of my room and announced callers. "Miss Warren and Mr. Haldane."

"What a nice piece of old-fashioned courtesy," commented Jim.

"What do you mean?" I asked in a flutter about taking off my hat again.

"Calling the Sunday before the dinner to which you've invited them," he replied. "Take your bonnet off, Anne. It don't hurt Tommie and the kids to wait, and Mr. Haldane is the most important person you've ever had visit you. Hope Tom's a bit late."

"Sing-ho for the Harrison pride!" I laughed, vastly pleased nevertheless at the good impression this renewal of auld acquaintance was producing on Jim.

Then we went out to greet our callers. Mr. Haldane is a real gentleman of the old school, in frock coat, gray striped trousers, gray spats, and he wore a white carnation in his buttonhole as casually as he wore his air of old-fashioned courtesy. Iron gray and keen of hair and eyes, he had more than ever the air of gentleness and impending break I had felt toward the end of my employment in his office. He stooped over my hand gravely from his slender height, and then presented his companion with his well-remembered air of making a rite of each least thing that came along for him to do.

"Mrs. Harrison, let me present my niece, Irma Warren. You have met before I think. Miss Warren, Lieutenant Harrison. Dear me, dear me! I'm fancying myself back on the war basis, where we met and I made your happy match for you, Mr. Harrison."

Jim and our masculine guest shook hands on that and asked permission to light cigars, so I was left free to renew acquaintances with Irma Warren. I saw a plump girl of about five feet three, with twinkling blue eyes which might appear large if her face weren't too roly-poly and apple-cheeked.

Wavy bronze gold hair and a nose that is clear cut and beautifully chiselled redeem her from the look of blowziness and commonness her wide mouth, high color and over developed figure might otherwise give her. Her hands are a bit common, too. Boyish and capable I found when she gripped my fingers in a hearty squeeze. But they are counterbalanced, as I discovered later by slim, high-arched feet. And her wide mouth parted in a generous smile which shows the loveliest of white teeth.

Tom Mason Arrives

She wore a plain little blue voile dress and a flat black hat trimmed with a ribbon bow. I got a sensation of being back home again, and seeing one of my high school companions in her first long dress. The city hadn't set its mark on Irma Warren. Even to a casual glance she is "small-town stuff." I wondered what the Harrisons would make of her.

"I'm so pleased to meet you again," she was saying, even as I sized her up in a pleased and thoroughly comfortable glance. "I don't know many people in the city except the editors uncle brings home. And I've nothing to say that they'd want to hear—so I listen mostly. You'll understand if I talk too much now, won't you?" she concluded, grinning as she poked a little fun at herself.

And just then Tom Mason walked in. I'd heard the bell vaguely on the edges of consciousness while she was talking, and had felt sorry that our visit must be cut short, and still sorrier over the embarrassment and the disappointment I was sure my visitors would feel. Now I fumbled for words as Jim went forward to greet and present Tom. But before anyone could speak Tom burst out heartily:

"Good for you, Donna Anna! Here we are—all ready to start. I knew when I commissioned you to bring along a girl to cheer the old bachelor I could count on you. And Mr. Haldane, too! You see, sir, I don't need to be told who you are. But I hope Jim Harrison has found a good word to say for me."

He bowed gravely to our distinguished guest. Yet I felt that every word he said was for Irma Warren's benefit.

To Be Continued.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND Chambers

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

CHAMBERS

VARIATIONS — Chamberlain, Chamberlayne.

RACIAL ORIGIN—Norman-French.

SOURCE—Title of office.

TO understand the frequency with which this family name is met today some explanation of the social organization of England in the Middle Ages, following the Norman-French occupation, is necessary.

The life and business and social customs of the Normans were highly organized. Disciplined, perhaps, would be a better word. The Normans extended their conquest over such a large portion of northern Europe because of the very high organization and discipline which permeated their entire social structure. They won their wars because they regarded war and the preparation for it as "thoroughly a business proposition," to apply a modern phrase. In this they were like the Romans, and, unlike the Anglo-Saxons and the Celts who preceded them in England, and who, though fighters of the utmost personal bravery and prowess, lacked that discipline, sense of co-operation and rather scientific attitude which marked the Normans.

An important part of the Norman organization, for peace and war both, was the office of the "chamberlain," so called because he had access to their superiors' inner privacy. The chamberlains were, in fact, the private secretaries and treasurers of the rulers of the various feudal divisions of the country. They were the expert accountants. They constituted the business end of the Norman feudal system. And it was natural that their offices, like the authority of their superiors, should become hereditary and that the title of "de la chaumbre" ("of the chamber"), and "le chamberlain" ("the chamberlain") should eventually come to designate the family instead of the office and that the tendency toward simplicity should eliminate the prefixes "de la" and "le" upon the reassertion of the Anglo-Saxon tongue.

Apparently there is much confusion in the genealogy of the Chambers family of America, but one thing is certain, that they were always worthy citizens of whatever society they graced. The Chambers family of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, are quite as prominent as any of the name in America. Colonel Benjamin Chambers is said to have laid out the town, built the fort and the town mill. General Benjamin Chambers was the Revolutionary soldier the family presented to their country. Later, in the war of 1812, he was a brigadier-general. He was the son of Ezekiel Chambers of Maryland and held many offices of honor, was Maryland State Senator, later United States Senator, and Chief Justice of the Maryland Court of Appeals. Captain James Chambers was the most distinguished soldier of all, winning eternal honor for himself when he went to assist in the "league" of Boston, at the start of the Revolution.

Tomorrow—Cadwallader

On the Wrong Side

It was the firm rule at a certain bank that mistakes in handling money could not be recognized unless pointed out by the customer at once.

One day a local tradesman sent his boy for some change and the lad brought back a wrong amount. So the master went round.

"I sent my boy to draw some money," he began to explain, "and the amount I received is not correct, and"——

The cashier broke in gruffly: "We never make any corrections after anyone leaves the bank."

"Oh, thank you so much!" was the customer's smiling reply. "I got five dollars too much. Good day!"

FRECKLE-FACE
Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily
Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.
Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.
Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advertisement.

NOTED WOMAN WRITER DIES IN ARLINGTON

Funeral services for Virginia F. Townsend of Arlington Heights, a well-known author, who died in a private hospital in Arlington, following a short illness, will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the chapel at Mount Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge. The deceased had lived at The Outlook in Arlington Heights for some years. She was a native of New Haven, Ct., and was eighty-six years old.

Among the better known of her books are "The Mills of Tuxbury," "Hollands," "Sixteen All," "The Deerings of Medway," "Lenox Dare" and "A Boston Girl's Ambition." For many years she had been a member of the Boston Authors' Club.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—Advertisement.

Discolored or Spotted Skin Easily Peeled Off

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which most skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Ordinary mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. You need not get more than an ounce of the wax from your druggist. There's no more effective way of banishing tan, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and you soon acquire a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.—Advertisement.

ARE MARKS WORTH BUYING?

A cold, dispassionate analysis of German financial conditions and a discussion on their foreign aspect

Will Marks ever return to normal value?

What will be the ultimate effect of the unrestrained issuance of German paper?

How will the enormous payments required of Germany by the Allied Governments affect the value of the Mark?

Will Germany be obliged to repudiate her obligations?

These questions are of vital importance to all contemplating the purchase of German money. We have prepared a careful analysis, written by an expert, of the conditions affecting Germany and her political and financial future.

Lead Price Advanced

New York, August 13.—The American Smelting & Refining Co. yesterday advanced its price of lead from 8½ to 9 cents a pound.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Aug. 13.—Active buying of January contracts for Japanese account was a feature at the opening of the cotton market and partly responsible for an initial advance of 8 to 20 points. Other buying was attracted by continued wet weather in the belt, but offerings from Wall Street forced prices about 30 points below the first high levels. Buying towards the end of the twenty minutes forced prices up about 5 points from the lowest. Opening prices were: October, 31.45; December, 30.30; January, 29.10; February, 28.75 bid; March, 28.65; May, 28.35; June, 28.00 bid; July, 27.90 bid.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Wheat opened at ½c to 1½c higher; corn, ½c lower to ¼c higher; oats were ⅛c to ¼c higher; provisions were generally lower. Opening prices were: Wheat—December, 2.45 to 2.46½; March, 2.50 to 2.49. Corn—September, 1.52½ to 1.51¾; December, 1.27 to 1.28¾. Oats—September, 72¼ to 72½; December, 71 to 70¾. Pork—September, 25.45. Lard—September, 18.85; October, 19.25. Ribs—September, 15.40; October, 15.82.

New York Sub-Treasury Gain

New York, Aug. 13.—The sub-treasury gained $1,298,000 from the banks on Thursday, making a cash net gain since Friday of $1,174,000.

STEEL ISSUES ARE LEADERS

Oils, Equipments, Motors and Rails All Join in the Morning Advance

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, prices being about the highest at the end of the forenoon. Steels were leaders, and oils, equipments, motors and carriers had all had a part in the advance. Trading was of moderate volume, first hour transactions totaling about 125,000 shares. Call loans again renewed at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange rates were steady, demand sterling being up a fraction. The strength of National Aniline was due to the formal announcement of the terms of the chemical consolidation.

Strongest issues included American Linseed Oil, Barrett, Sumatra, American Woolen common, Atlantic Gulf, Crucible, Shell Transport, Kelly Springfield, Mexican Petroleum, Stromberg, Replogle and U. S. Rubber. At their highest they were up from two to three points.

HAD A MIXED OPENING.

The price movement was mixed when trading began and the market had a very quiet start. But stocks were not offered so freely as at the close of the preceding session and the tone was good. The early movement was upward, although it was not forceful, and after a period of irregularity the list looked strong. Chemicals were features at the outset, Barrett soon showing nearly three and National Aniline more than five points gain. Crucible was a strong steel and American Woolen common sold at three points advance. Point or more gains were common before the end of an hour. Oils were prominent in the upturn, and particularly Shell Transport. Motors had a good opening and made further improvement. Rails ruled lower at the beginning, but rallied. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western receded five on its first transaction. What was said of carriers was true of equipments. As usual, Baldwin was the most in evidence, but American Locomotive was stronger.

SITUATION IS UNCHANGED.

No change in the situation was discernible this morning. The European situation is regarded as critical, but is having less influence upon stocks than would be expected under ordinary circumstances. The market is purely professional in character and its technical position is sustaining prices at present. The credit strain has neither increased nor decreased to any appreciable degree. It is felt mostly just now in agricultural sections, where crop moving must have first consideration. Commodity prices are steadier, and it is a grave question which way they will go. In some quarters a revival of industrial activity is expected in the Autumn, but in others a contrary course is predicted. Both manufacturers and merchants are trying hard to convert goods into cash, but with the public expecting bargain offerings later in the year such liquidation is not easy.

Crop Estimates

The condition of the Louisiana sugar cane crop on August 4 was estimated by the Department of Agriculture at 74 as compared with 64 on the corresponding 1919 date and 85 in 1918.

The Aroostook County potato crop condition is estimated at 80, which indicates a yield of 28,895,000 bushels, against 24,480,000 bushels last year. The average yield for five years is 23,309,000 bushels.

Copper Mining Reports

For the second quarter of this year reports by porphyry copper companies are as follows:

Utah Copper Co., total profit $2,240,470, equivalent to $1.38 a share, against $2,870,590, or $1.76 a share in preceding quarter, and $2,652,103, or $1.63 a share in corresponding 1919 quarter. For six months ended June 30, 1920, total profits were $5,111,059, equivalent to $3.15 a share, against $3,183,427 or $1.93 a share in corresponding period of 1919.

Ray Consolidated Copper Co. gross profit after charges of $387,255, equivalent to 24 cents a share, against $637,300, or 40 cents a share in preceding quarter, and $316,365, or 20 cents a share in corresponding 1919 quarter. Gross income after charges for six months totaled $1,024,555, equivalent to 65 cents a share, against $164,068, or 10 cents a share for the same period in 1919.

Nevada Consolidated Copper Co. total income, after depreciation charges, of $384,000, equivalent to 19 cents a share. In preceding quarter net profit after depreciation was $215,583, or 11 cents a share, while in June quarter of 1919 total income was $184,788, or nine cents a share. For six months total income was $569,583, equivalent to 30 cents a share, against $73,619, or three cents a share in corresponding 1919 period.

Corporation Earnings

For the period from July 31, 1919, to April 15 this year, the American Sumatra Co. reports gross profit of $3,617,900, net profit of $3,037,482, and net income of $3,125,297.

The gross sales of the American Writing Paper Co. for the first half of 1920 amounted to $15,619,684, and its net before Federal taxes to $1,421,569.

July sales by the United Cigar Stores Co. totaled $6,906,623, an increase of $1,520,151 or 36 per cent. over a year ago. Seven months sales amounted to $43,254,338, an increase of $10,287,674, or 31 per cent.

Four New Oil Wells

Middle States Oil Corporation's subsidiaries during the week ending August 9 completed four new wells, they being Nos. 23 and 24 of the Peters Oil Co. in the shallow district of the Osage Nation, Oklahoma, and coming in above 125 barrels each; and Nos. 14 and 15 of Texas Chief, in the Shappel lease, Burkburnett, Texas, flowing 50 barrels and 200, respectively.

TONE IMPROVES IN BOSTON

Local Market Has an Irregular Start but Becomes Strong; Curb Very Dull

Local stocks were irregular at the opening, but there were more up than down and the tendency was toward a higher level. This was reached soon, and by the end of the morning the Boston market was strong. Davis Daly began at new low for the year and Elder sold at its 1920 lowest later on. United Shoe was unusually strong, gaining more than a point. Edison advanced three. United Fruit receded a point on its first sale, but recovered most of the loss before noon. Allouez was a strong copper, advancing two. Wolverine dropped a point on the sale of one share. New Haven was the strongest rail. Boston & Maine was unsteady. Packing issues were quiet and auto accessory stocks were neglected.

Among stocks to make fractional gains were New Haven, U. S. Smelting, Ventura, Orpheum, Atlas Tack, Libby, Bigheart and North Butte.

Small losses were shown by United Fruit, Elder, Swift International and New Cornelia. Davis Daly rallied and was up a trifle higher before the morning was over.

CURB MARKET APATHETIC.

The Curb market had an apathetic start. An unusual number of stocks were unchanged on first transactions. Mutual was the most active issue in early trading. It was strong as were Eureka and Consolidated Coppermines. While the market was about as dull as it could be, the tone seemed firm.

At the end of an hour Mutual was up ⅜ at 1⅜ and Consolidated Coppermines ¼ at 1⅞. Texana was off 1 cent at 8 cents. Eureka had lost a cent gain.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

July copper production by the Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelter & Power Co. was 2,400,000 pounds.

For the first half of this year Fairbanks, Morse & Co., Inc., reports surplus of $2,079,182, compared with $1,593,836 in the six months ended June 30, 1919.

Manchester, N. H., will receive bids until 2 p. m., August 17, for $350,000 5 per cent. coupon "school" bonds, dated August 2, and payable $17,500 August 1 in each of the years 1922 to 1939 inclusive.

The Southwestern Miami Development Co. has a drill down 2,570 feet and in black slate on its oil land leases in Young County, Tex., and the management expects to encounter at 2,650 feet the rich oil sand that produced the gusher for the Panhandle Oil Co.

The Boston News Bureau says that J. R. Williston of J. R. Williston & Co., who has been bearish on the market for some time, wired his Boston office that he had turned bullish and looked for advancing prices to continue for some time.

President Struckmann states that net earnings by the International Cement Corporation for the first quarter of this year amounted, after depreciation, interest and taxes, to $225,346, which is equivalent to approximately $0.86 per share on the 261,652 shares outstanding.

The Worcester Gas Light Co. has been authorized to issue $200,000 first mortgage bonds at 85 per cent. of par and accrued interest from July 1, 1920, to maturity of bonds July 1, 1939, on condition that the company set aside each year an amount sufficient in twenty years to aggregate the amount of the discount, or $30,000.

The city treasurer's July statement shows that receipts for six months for city of Boston and Suffolk County account amounted to $17,062,166, while expenditures totaled $23,524,212. The balance on hand as of July 31 last was $5,416,086. Total funded debt is $123,332,201, as compared with $124,121,201 a month ago.

A stock dividend will be paid by the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Co. on September 15 to stockholders of record August 1. The stock to be disbursed is that of the Goldfield Deep Mines Co. and distribution to the stockholders of the Goldfield Consolidated will be at the rate of one share of the Deep Mines for each share of Goldfield Consolidated.

Dividend Declarations

American Locomotive Co. declared quarterly dividends of 1½ per cent. on common and 1¾ per cent. on preferred, payable September 30 to stock of record September 13.

'LAZY LUBIN' OPENS COPLEY

Jewett's Players Offer Fine Character Acting in Play New to America

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Henry Jewett signalized the new season at the Copley by producing for the first time in America a piece called "Lazy Lubin."

Mr. Jewett's company is competent enought and some fine character acting was done by Conway Wingfield, Viola Roach and Blanche Le Roy.

But "Lazy Lubin" is a dreary affair. Nothing whatsoever happens in the interminable first act until the very end, when a slightly compromising situation is created by main force without alarming a single old lady in the audience.

It was then half past nine, and I figured that if "Lazy Lubon" hadn't offered any action by that time it probably never would.

It was a hot night and the playwright and the players hadn't awakened any curiosity in me as to what happened when the slow Scotch landlady caught the little French girl sleeping in Lubin's bed (off stage). Very likely the poor girl had to marry Lubin. I don't know. I came away.

NAVY WILL HELP KEEP ORDER

Special Patrol in New London to Put Stop to Disturbances by Sailors

New London, Aug. 13.—As a result of numerous rows between local police officials and sailors within the past fortnight, Captain Frederick Oliver, commandant at the U. S. submarine base here, has ordered a naval patrol to aid in the policing of the streets. The patrol will be made up entirely of chief petty officers and will patrol each night for the next three months.

It is the first time that a naval patrol has performed duty here since the days immediately following the signing of the armistice, and the order for the patrol came only after the patience of the naval officials and local police officials had become exhausted.

During the past two weeks there have been several serious encounters between the police and a number of the younger sailors stationed at the base.

MEASURES THAT WOULD CURE MOST OF THE TROUBLES AND TENDENCIES WHICH DISTRESS AND ALARM US TODAY

(1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
(2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
(3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.
(4) To elect Federal Judges, including the Supreme Court Justices, by popular vote.
(5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum and the Recall to national matters.

Behold the British Fleet

Big Force on a Small Errand

Copyright, 1920, by Star Company

At last the powerful British fleet has come forth.

The mighty ships of the line that typify Britain's alleged sovereignty at sea have steamed out in warlike array.

To blow some powerful enemy out of the water? To match themselves, ship for ship, and gun for gun, against a foe?

Oh, no! The British fleet came out with its grim guns unmasked to remove from a peaceful liner a solitary old gentleman whose errand was no more sinister than a visit to his people.

Winsor McCay's fine cartoon at the right shows you the removal of Archbishop Mannix by the British destroyers as it appeals to his mind, and as it must appeal to the minds of all right thinking people.

The British wanted to prevent Archbishop Mannix from going to Ireland where he would receive more sincere homage than any British king will ever receive, or has ever earned. A fine mission for brave sailormen in their warboats!

As an exhibition of British stupidity the incident would be funny had it not brought about discomfort and inconvenience to a fine old gentleman.

"If Lightning Should Strike"

"If lightning should strike this tent tonight, how many would be ready for it?"

The Rev. John Timber, evangelist, put the question to a congregation of Free Methodists at Springville, Indiana, near Laporte, the other night.

A few minutes later a bolt of lightning killed two ministers on the platform.

We read that item of news and marvel for an instant on the workings of coincidence. Perhaps some of us wonder, vaguely:

Were they ready?

Undoubtedly. They were men who had spent their lives getting ready.

We dismiss the incident from our minds, and pass on to the next item of news. How many of us think of it long enough to put the Rev. John Timber's question to ourselves—

"If lightning should strike this tent tonight, how many would be ready for it?"

It may sound a little like the preaching that the Rev. John Timber expounds to his congregations, but what of you, Reader?

What of your worldly affairs? Are they in order? Are you prepared to withstand the bolts of adversity? Have you made provision for the wife and children, and the old father and mother?

And what of your CONSCIENCE? Is that in order?

Is there anything you have left undone? Is there anything you have left unsaid?

It is all very well to remark: "Oh, the fellow's preaching," and to let the eye and mind drift to the next topic, but you waste no time, or effort, it doesn't cost you a nickel, to carry, somewhere in the back of your head, and occasionally to think of the Rev. John Timber's question:

"If lightning should strike this tent tonight, how many would be ready for it?"

That Which Shall Endure

There is a good deal of a tendency in this brutal, materialistic age, to worship the great, stupid god, Fact. A hard, gritty, tangible brick is considered much more real than a shimmering, flickering idea. Hence we are building thirty-story office buildings, but we are writing no Hamlets nor Iliads.

It seems to be a self-evident truth that the thing which is is more real than the thing which is only imagined. However, it is not true at all. Dreams, on the contrary, are more enduring than court testimony. Fancy is more permanent than fact. An airy nothing of the brain will outlive a stone castle.

There are few facts of history that are not questioned, even denied; the statements of legend are not denied. What's the use? They do not pretend to be true. They are saved by their modesty. Pride goeth before a fall; and the insolvent historical date meets the fate of all boasters and is eventually discredited, while the gay and debonair myth, which never put on airs of verity, lives on to charm the race.

The works of the imagination stand the storms of centuries, while the works of man's hands fall. The tooth of time which gnaws the temple is powerless against the legend of its god. The ancient shrines of India are fallen down and gone, over their scattered stones the lizard creeps and the moss grows, trees have sprung up in the cracks of their monoliths; but the folk tales which Hindu mothers sang in the days when these holy houses were freshly built Hindu mothers still sing to their babes today, when the antiquary is trying to decipher the inscription on the temple fragments.

The Roman Forum is a hole in the ground, a marble wilderness of destruction, though it was "once and long the centre of the universe, whence a mandate, eagle-winged, went to the ends of the earth"; but the poems of one Horace, who walked its streets in the days of its prime, are yet learned by school children the world over; rock and bronze have perished; it was the singer who built the "monument more lasting than brass."

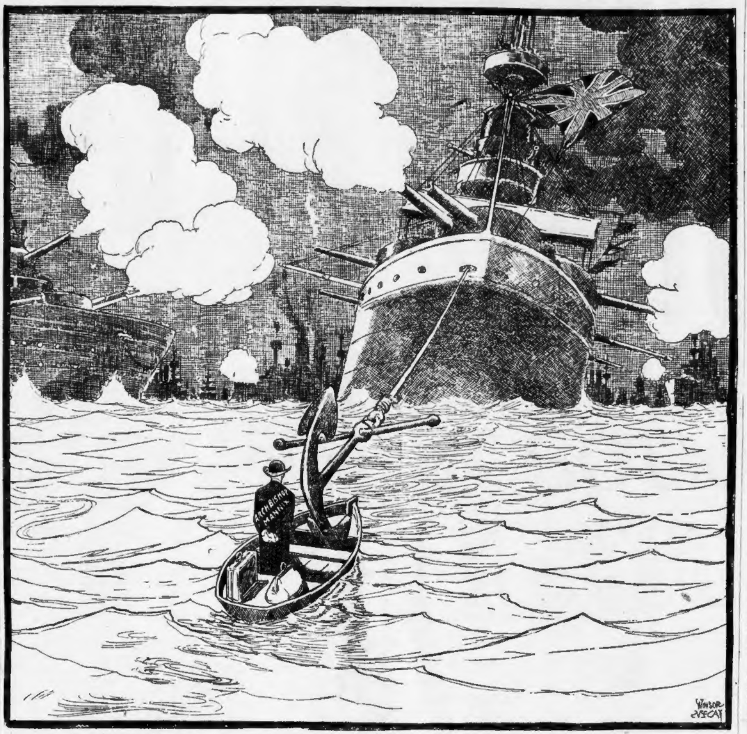
Mr. Dooley said that we didn't know where we are going, but we're sure on our way. Whither we are going, the past tells us. It is toward a goal with which the "principalities and powers" of this day have nothing to do. The modern kings of finance who occupy the eye of the world, the freak society leaders, the lords and powers of ostentation, are the mere scaffolding of the social edifice of the coming century. They shall rest in forgotten graves.

But he who has a thought and can dream, he who can see the unseen and make his fellows see it, he who can tap the infinite and translate it into human terms, his personality shall live on through the ages fed by the dust of rotting millionaires.

An ounce of beauty is worth more than a ton of brick.

One word of creative genius is worth more than the Old South Building.

Extra!!! British Fleet Comes Out at Last



Another line for this cartoon would be: "How Easy It Is for the World's Greatest Empire to Play the Fool."

More Truth Than Poetry

Fancy Has a Broken Wing

By S. E. KISER

"BEFORE we arrived on earth this time,"
I said to the lady fair,
"It was you that helped to make Troy sublime,
And I met and adored you there.
They spoke of Helen and gave her praise,
And Helen was fair to view,
But never in all her halcyon days
Was Helen as fair as you.

"DO you not sometimes, when alone, recall
While giving your fancy wings,
Our strolls together upon the wall
When Hector was running things?
I behold you now as I saw you then,
When a sheet was your only dress,
And I was envied by other men
Because of your loveliness.

"DO you never have dreamlike memories
Of those glorious nights in Troy,
When Helen and you were divinities
And I was a sandaled boy?
We strolled together upon the sands
Ere ever the Grecians came,
And we whispered nothings while holding hands,
And Daphne was your dear name."

I SAT alone with the lady fair,
Who wrinkled her lovely brow;
She seemed to be wondering when and where
And probably why and how.
"Some little kidder you seem to be,
But you've got the wrong dope, my boy;
I passed through Albany once," said she,
"But I never have been to Troy."

I NEVER HAVE BEEN TO TROY

Things to Think About

What Life Is

LIFE is hard because it is something to do, not something to learn.

Life is not a problem, it is a task. We don't have to understand it, we have to live it.

For life is an art, not a science. It is a trade, not a puzzle. You learn to live as you would learn to lay brick or carve statues or manage a farm.

Clean Business

Better than big business is clean business.

A clean profit is one that has also made a profit for the other fellow.

Any gain that arises from another's loss is dirty.

A man that makes a habit, every deal he goes into, of asking himself, "What is there in it for the other fellow?" and who refuses to enter into any transaction where his own gain will mean disaster to someone else, cannot go far wrong.

The only really charitable dollar is the clean dollar.

Defining Happiness

Nothing is more talked about than happiness.

BUT WHAT IS IT?

Here's the answer:

HAPPINESS IS GREAT LOVE AND MUCH SERVICE.

The great mass of men are reasonably happy because they are in love and at work.

They complain of their work. Even call labor a curse. They dream of a life of idleness and self-indulgence, and imagine that is heaven. It is not. It is hell. This world was made for lovers and servants.

If your heart is full of love, and your hands full of service, nothing need bother you.

You have solved the riddle of existence.

By K. C. B.

AT THE New York Hippodrome.
ON THE opening night.
AND IT was crowded.
AND VERY warm.
AND EVERYBODY was there.
FROM JOE Weber.
WHO IS a boy's size.
TO BURR McIntosh.
WHO IS an out size.
BUT ANYWAY.
THAT'S NO matter.
AND IN the show.
THERE ARE thirty girls.
OR FORTY girls.
AND ALL of them march.
DOWN MARBLE steps.
AND INTO the tank.
AND NEVER stop.
AND GO right under.
AND DISAPPEAR.
AND ALONGSIDE of me.
THERE WAS a man.
WITH AN open face.
AND A red tie.
AND HOT.
AND JUST at the moment.
THE MARCHING girls.
WENT UNDER water.
HE GRABBED the arms.
OF HIS orchestra chair.
AND STIFFENED himself.
AND TOOK a long breath.
AND HE was so close.
I HADN'T the nerve.
TO LOOK in his face.
TILL IT seemed to me.
HE NEEDED help.
AND THEN I looked.
AND HIS eyes were glassy.
AND HIS face blue.
AND ON his forehead.
THERE WAS perspiration.
AND A fly.
AND HE was shiny.
AND TERRIBLE looking.
AND ALL at once.
HIS LIMBS relaxed.
AND A gush of air.
CAME FROM his mouth.
AND I didn't know him.
AND I didn't ask him.
BUT I think he was trying.
TO HOLD his breath.
TILL THE girls came up.
AND I could 'a' told him.
IF HE'D done it.
HE'D 'A' died.

I THANK you.

WOMEN AND MEN ALIKE IN WORK WORLD

By Winifred Black

ARE women more spiteful, more vindictive and more personal in their business relations than men?

I heard some one say so the other day, and I am wondering if it is true.

Somehow, I can't believe it.

It is quite true that a number of women working together under the direction of a man will be jealous of each other, and sometimes spiteful—and vindictive.

I've seen a mean, little jealous creature upset a whole office and keep a fine plan for the benefit of a firm from going through because, in the working out of that plan some other woman had been given an equal chance with her.

I've known mean, spiteful little women to wreck the whole business career of a man, or try to wreck it, because she suspected him of admiring another girl in the office more than he admired her.

I've known a malicious, talebearing, back-biting, gossiping girl to set a whole establishment by the ears in the hopes of getting the junior partner to invite her out to lunch, so she could brag about it to the other girls as long as she lived.

But I have also known exactly the same sort of thing going on among men—of exactly the same sort.

I know a man who makes it his business to humiliate and annoy every man who works for him—not because he dislikes the man particularly, but because he wants to feel his own importance and to make every one else feel it.

Modern business is a great battle, hour by hour and minute by minute, and every business establishment is full of plots and politics, and wire-pulling and talebearing, from the office force up to the president. And I don't think the entrance of women into business has had very much to do with it.

Of course, when the element of sex rivalry comes into play, things are complicated a little.

Breadth of mind, depth of soul, warmth of heart, keenness of perception, tolerance, justice—there is no sex in any of these qualities. They belong to women and to men exactly alike.

Uncle Sam as Plug Ugly?

Why Europe Wants Us in the League of Nations

By DAMON RUNYON

IT used to be the custom of the English dandy to have a plug ugly tagging at his heels to take care of any fights in which my lord might become involved.

Generally the "gentleman" started the muss, and then passed it on to his pet slugger. A "gentleman" with a slugger at his heels was apt to be very testy toward other people and very easily affronted.

Of course, the "gentleman himself never soiled his fingers in a fight. He let his plugger deliver all the blows and receive all the black eyes. Sometimes the slugger got a fine beating.

Narrow-chested, spindling chaps to this day love to go around in company with hard-fisted fellows who can mix it a bit and who will take up arguments and slugging matches precipitated by their weakling companions.

Narrow-chested, spindling chaps attended by good fighters are easily irritated and truculent. It is not difficult for them to find offence and produce rows to turn over to their strong friends

Narrow-chested, spindling Europe would like very much to get your hard-fisted old Uncle Samuel in that League of Nations so he can pick up any row of weakling Europe's making.

It would like very much to have him sacrifice his blood and money in its behalf any time it felt it had been affronted. It knows that Uncle Sam is a tremendous hitter and well able to take care of any sort of fight. He has never lost one yet.

Narrow-chested, spindling Europe would like nothing better than to be able to crook a finger at Uncle Sam and start his fists swinging whenever it saw fit.

Narrow-chested, spindling Europe would be greatly pleased to stand by and see your Uncle Sam deliver all the blows, and receive all the black eyes of financial loss, and loss of human life.

That is what the League of Nations with the United States in would mean.

It would mean Uncle Sam at the beck of a weakling that would be mighty easily affronted with Uncle Sam at its heels. It will start many a fight if it knows it is shielded by the mighty fist of the big fellow across the sea.

It means that Uncle Sam would become a sort of professional slugger.

To the Editor

Cooling the Children

Editor Boston American:

During the present hot spell most of us have found this period particularly trying, but it has been immensely more so on little children. I wish to extend my appreciation to the men attached to Chemical 7, East Boston, in their efforts to make life more comfortable. Daily it has been a scene of great pleasure to see the children togged in bathing suits receiving a cold shower from a small hose extending from Chemical 7's house. This is a custom that might be practised more extensively in front of other fire houses where traffic is not too heavy.

EDWARD J. SMITH.
